The Ordaining of the Twelve Apostles

Saint Mark — Chap. 3

T ascendens in montem vocavit ad se quos voluit ipse, et venerunt ad eum.

14. Et fecit ut essent duodecim cum illo, et ut mitteret eos prædicare.

15. Et dedit illis potestatem curandi infirmitates et ejiciendi dæmonia.

16. Et imposuit Simoni nomen Petrus ;

AND he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth unto him whom he would : and they came unto him.

14. And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach,

15. And to have power to heal
sicknesses, and to cast out devils :

16. And Simon he surnamed Peter ;

17. Et Jacobum Zebedæi et Joannem fratrem Jacobi, et imposuit eis nomina Boanerges, quod est filii tonitruï;

18. Et Andream, et Philippum, et Bartholomæum, et Matthæum, et Thomam, et Jacobum Alphæi, et Thaddæum, et Simonem Chananæum, 19. Et Judam Iscariotem, qui et tradidit illum.

17. And James the son of Zebedee, and John the brother of James; and he surnamed them Boanerges, which is, The sons of thunder :

18. And Andrew, and Philip, and Bartholomew, and Matthew, and Thomas, and James the son of Alphæus, and Thaddæus, and Simon the Canaanite, 19. And Judas Iscariot, which also betrayed him.

42. Watch therefore : for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.

43. But know this, that if the goodman of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up.

44. Therefore be ye also ready : for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh.

When ye come into an house, salute it

Saint Matthew — Chap. 10

IN quacumque autem civitatem aut castellum intraveritis, interrogate, quis in ea dignus sit, et ibi manete donec exeatis.

12. Intranses autem in domum, salutate eam, dicentes: Pax huic domui.

13. Et si quidem fuerit domus illa digna, veniet pax vestra super eam; si autem non fuerit digna, pax vestra revertetur ad vos.

14. Et quicumque non receperit vos, neque audierit sermones vestros, exeuntes foras de domo vel civitate excutite pulverem de pedibus vestris.

15. Amen dico vobis, tolerabilius erit terræ Sodomorum et Gomorrhæorum in die iudicii quam illi civitati.

AND into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, enquire who in it is worthy; and there abide till ye go thence.

12. And when ye come into an house, salute it.

13. And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it: but if it be not worthy, let your peace return to you.

14. And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet.

15. Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than for that city.

When ye come into an house, salute it.

Jesus asleep during the storm

Saint Mark — Chap. 4

Et dimittentes turbam assumunt eum ita ut erat in navi, et aliæ naves erant cum illo.

37. Et facta est procella magna venti, et fluctus mittebat in navim, ita ut impleretur navis.

38. Et erat ipse in puppi super cervicali dormiens, et excitant eum, et

AND when they had sent away the multitude, they took him even as he was in the ship. And there were also with him other little ships.

37. And there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full.

38. And he was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow : and they

J.-J. 1

ET exurgens comminatus est vento, et dixit mari : Tace, obmutesce. Et cessavit ventus, et facta est tranquillitas magna.

40. Et ait illis : Quid timidi estis ? necdum habetis fidem ? Et timuerunt timore magno, et dicebant ad alterutrum : Quis, putas, est iste, quia et ventus et mare obediunt ei ?

SANCT. MARC. — C. 4.

AND he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm.

40. And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful ? how is it that ye have no faith ?

SANCT. MARK — CH. 4.

On the coasts of Judæa there are still to be seen boats of considerable size, which can be navigated either with oars or sails. In the narrower portion of the stern, referred to by Saint Mark as the « hinder part of the ship, » there was a small cabin in which, no doubt, Jesus was asleep. The sacred text tells us that He had His head upon a pillow, a small detail which proves that the vessel was of sufficient importance to have some furniture in its cabin.

In the Villages, the Sick were brought unto Him

Saint Mark — Chap. 6

ET percurrentes universam regionem illam, cœperunt in grabatis eos, qui se male habebant, circumferre, ubi audiebant eum esse.

56. Et quocumque introibat, in vicos vel in villas aut civitates, in plateis ponebant infirmos, et deprecabantur eum, ut vel fimbriam vestimenti ejus tangerent; et quotquot tangebant eum, salvi fiebant.

AND ran through that whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds those that were sick, where they heard he was.

56. And whithersoever he entered, into villages, or cities, or country, they laid the sick in the streets, and besought him that they might touch if it were but the border of his garment: and as many as touched him were made whole.

Jewish Bible at Jerusalem. J. J. T.

In the synagogues of Jerusalem, several examples may still be seen of Bibles of the kind represented in our engraving. The left hand scroll of manuscript, as it closed or unrolled, communicated a similar movement to that on the right, and the Priest could then read the writing laid bare between the two. As a rule, these scrolls are of very ancient date, and are enriched with ornaments in silver repoussé work on a velvet ground of a very deep red colour. The reader is generally attended by a clerk, who assists him by pointing out the passage to be given with a small rod, ending in a silver band.

My name is Legion

Saint Mark — Chap. 5

ET venerunt trans fretum maris in regionem Gerasenorum.

2. Et exeunti ei de navi statim occurrit de monumentis homo in spiritu immundo,

3. Qui domicilium habebat in monumentis, et neque catenis jam quisquam poterat eum ligare,

4. Quoniam sæpe compedibus et catenis vinc-tus dirupisset catenas, et compedes comminuisset, et nemo poterat eum domare, Valley of Hinnom.

J.-J. I.

5. Et semper die ac nocte in monumentis et in montibus erat, clamans et concidens se lapidibus.

6. Videns autem Jesum a longe, cucurrit et adoravit eum,

7. Et clamans voce magna dixit : Quid mihi et tibi, Jesu Fili Dei altissimi? adjuro te per Deum, ne me torqueas.

AND they came over unto the other side of the sea, into the country of the Gadarenes.

2. And when he was come out of the ship, immediately there met him out of the tombs a man with an unclean spirit,

3. Who had his dwelling among the tombs; and no man could bind him, no, not with chains;

4. Because that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked asunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces: neither could any man tame him.

5. And always, night and day, he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and cutting himself with stones.

6. But when he saw Jesus afar off, he ran and worshipped him,

7. And cried with a loud voice, and said, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not.

My name is Legion.

J.-J. T.

8. Dicebat enim illi : Exi, spiritus imunde, ab homine.

9. Et interrogabat eum : Quod tibi nomen est? Et dicit ei : Legio mihi nomen est, quia multi sumus.

10. Et deprecabatur eum multum, ne se expelleret extra regionem.

8. For he said unto him, Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit.

9. And he asked him, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, My name is Legion : for we are many.

10. And he besought him much that he would not send them away out of the country.

The two Men possessed with Devils

Saint Matthew — Chap. 8

ET quum venisset trans fretum in regionem Gerase-norum, occurrerunt ei duo habentes dæmonia, de monumentis exeuntes, sævi nimis, ita ut nemo posset transire per viam illam.

29. Et ecce clamaverunt dicentes : Quid nobis et tibi, Jesu Fili Dei? venisti huc ante tempus torquere nos?

AND when he was come to the other side into the country of the Gergesenes, there met him two possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass by that way.

29. And behold, they cried out, saying, What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God? art thou come hither to torment us before the time?

The Good Shepherd

Saint John — Chap. 10

GO sum pastor bonus. Bonus pastor animam suam dat pro ovibus suis ;

12. Mercenarius autem, et qui non est pastor, cujus non sunt oves propriæ, videt lupum venientem, et dimittit oves et fugit, et lupus rapit et dispergit oves.

13. Mercenarius autem fugit, quia mercenarius est et non pertinet ad eum de ovibus.

14. Ego sum pastor bonus, et cognosco meas, et cognoscunt me meæ :

15. Sicut novit me Pater et ego cognosco Patrem, et animam meam pono pro ovibus meis.

16. Et alias oves habeo, quæ non sunt ex hoc ovili ; et illas oportet me adducere, et vocem meam audient, et fiet unum ovile et unus pastor.

17. Propterea me diligit Pater, quia

AM the good shepherd : the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.

12. But he that is an hireling, and not the shepherd, whose own thesheepare not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep and fleeth : and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep.

13. The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep.

14. I am the good shepherd ; and I know my sheep, and am known of mine.

15. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father ; and I lay down my life for the sheep.

16. And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold : them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice ; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

17. Therefore doth my Father love me,

The Good Shepherd.

J.-J. T.

ego pono animam meam, ut iterum sumam eam.

because I lay down my life, that I may take it again.

How often I have seen a shepherd carrying a lost lamb over the rocks on his way to the sheepfold! He holds it on his shoulders with its feet held against his breast, and many a time have I seemed to recognize a likeness to the Christ in the features of some such carer for the sheep, a fact which to my mind made the symbol yet more striking. I was the more impressed with this when, as was sometimes the case, the shepherd had his head bound up, telling of the dangers he had run in rescuing his lamb from some robber, or in climbing over the obstacles in his path, whilst seeking the lost one.

This parable of the Good Shepherd, which is one of the most beautiful in the Gospels, is also one of those which were most often chosen for illustration by artists in early Christian times. The catacombs of Rome are full of figures and groups recalling it, which were faithfully repeated in the Middle Ages.

The Swine driven into the Sea

L RAT autem non longe ab illis grex multorum porcorum pascens.

31. Dæmones autem rogabant eum, dicentes : Si ejicis nos hinc, mitte nos in gregem porcorum.

32. Et ait illis : Ite. At illi exeuntes abierunt in porcos, et ecce impetu abiit totus grex per præceps in mare, et mortui sunt in aquis.

33. Pastores autem fugerunt, et venientes in civitatem nuntiaverunt

AND there was a good way off from them an herd of many swine feeding.

31. So the devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into the herd of swine.

32 And he said unto them, Go. And when they were come out, they went into the herd of swine : and behold, the whole herd of swine ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and perished in the waters.

33. And they that kept them fled, and went their ways into the city, and told omnia, et de eis, qui dæmonia habuerant.

34. Et ecce tota civitas exiit obviam Jesu, et viso eo rogabant, ut transiret a finibus eorum.

We know that by the law of Moses swine were declared unclean, as well as all other animals with undivided hoofs, with those which, though their hoofs were cloven, did not chew the cud. Perhaps, in the case of the swine, hygienic considerations had something to do with the prohibition, but, however that may have been, that prohibition was very distinct; the Jews were forbidden either to eat their flesh or to offer them up in sacrifice in the Temple. The use of anything made from any part of these animals was equally prohibited, but, in spite of all these restrictions, certain Jews of Galilee, which was on the borders of districts inhabited by the Gentiles, owned large herds of swine, as a speculation, and made considerable sums of money by so doing. Not being able, according to the terms of the law, to keep these animals themselves, they had them looked after by Gentile swine-herds, and sold them later to the Romans, or the heathen inhabitants of Tyre and Sidon, and of the shores every thing, and what was befallen to the possessed of the devils.

34. And behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus: and when they saw him, they besought him that he would depart out of their coasts.

of the Mediterranean adjoining the country of Galilee.

On the further side of the lake of Galilee, in the heathen portion of Palestine, there were desert districts of considerable extent, well suited to the keeping of swine, and they were herded together there in great numbers. Jesus sometimes visited these wilds, attracted, doubtless, by the knowledge of the oppression and miseries of every kind weighing down its inhabitants. It would appear, however, from the Gospel narrative, that the presence of the Saviour, and the miracles performed by Him, inspired the people with terror rather than with gratitude. These rude, untutored peasants mourned more over the loss of a herd of swine than they rejoiced at the advent of a prophet. The extraordinary scene described by the Evangelists filled them with nameless dread, instead of leading them to reflect on its true meaning, and they fled, beseeching Jesus « to depart out of their coasts ».

The Raising of Jairus' daughter

Saint Mark — Chap. 5

ET venit quidam de archi-synagogis nomine Jairus, et videns eum procidit
ad pedes ejus,

23. Et deprecabatur eum multum, dicens : Quoniam filia mea in extremis est, veni, impone manum super eam, ut salva sit et vivat.

24. Et abiit cum illo, et sequebatur eum turba multa, et comprimebant eum.

AND behold, there cometh one of the rulers of the synagogue, Jairus by name; and when he saw him, he fell at his feet,

23. And besought him greatly, saying,
My little daughter lieth at the point of death : I pray thee, come and lay thy hands on her, that she may be healed ;
and she shall live.

24. And Jesus went with him; and much people followed him, and thronged him.

35. Adhuc eo loquente veniunt ab archisynagogo, dicentes : Quia filia tua mortua est : quid ultra vexas Magistrum ?

36. Jesus autem audito verbo, quod dicebatur, ait archisynagogo : Noli timere, tantummodo crede.

37. Et non admisit quemquam se sequi, nisi Petrum et Jacobum et Joannem fratrem Jacobi.

38. Et veniunt in domum archisynagogi, et videt tumultum et flentes et eculantes multum.

39. Et ingressus ait illis : Quid turbamini et ploratis ? puella non est mortua, sed dormit.

40. Et irridebant eum. Ipse vero, eiectis omnibus, assumit patrem et matrem puellæ et qui secum erant, et ingreditur ubi puella erat jacens.

41. Et tenens manum puellæ ait illi : Talitha cumi, quod est interpretatum : Puella, tibi dico, surge.

42. Et confestim surrexit puella et ambulabat (erat autem annorum duodecim), et obstupuerunt stupore magno.

35. While he yet spake, there came from the ruler of the synagogue's house certain which said, Thy daughter is dead : why troublest thou the Master any further ?

36. As soon as Jesus heard the word that was spoken, he saith unto the ruler of the synagogue, Be not afraid, only believe.

37. And he suffered no man to follow him, save Peter, and James, and John the brother of James.

38. And he cometh to the house of the ruler of the synagogue, and seeth the tumult, and them that wept and wailed greatly.

39. And when he was come in, he saith unto them, Why make ye this ado, and weep ? the damsel is not dead, but sleepeth.

40. And they laughed him to scorn. But when he had put them all out, he taketh the father and the mother of the damsel, and them that were with him, and entereth in where the damsel was lying.

41. And he took the damsel by the hand, and said unto her, Talitha cumi ; which is, being interpreted, Damsel, I say unto thee, arise.

42. And straightway the damsel arose, and walked ; for she was of the age of twelve years. And they were astonished with a great astonishment.

Bir-Ayoub or Job's Well

J.-J. I.

43. Et præcepit illis vehementer, ut nemo id sciret, et dixit dari illi manducare.

43. And he charged them straitly that no man should know it; and commanded that something should be given her to eat.

Jesus preaching by the sea side

Saint Matthew — Chap. 13

In illo die exiens Jesus de domo sedebat secus mare.

In wandering slowly on foot by the Sea of Tiberias in the neighbourhood of Magdala, near the so-called Horns of Hattin, rocks occur at intervals, any one of which might very well serve as a seat for a teacher wishing to address a crowd. Why should not Jesus, Who, the Evangelists tell us, often taught the people by the sea, have used one of these very stones? It seems to us that we are quite justified in assuming that He did, especially as the surrounding districts are lofty, rendering the place very suitable to His purpose, from an acoustic point of view.

The dumb man possessed with a devil

Saint Matthew — Chap. 12

TUNC oblatuſ est ei dæmonium habens cæcus et mutus, et curavit eum, ita ut loqueretur et videret.

23. Et stupebant omnes turbæ, et

THEN was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind and dumb: and he healed him, insomuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw.

23. And all the people were amazed, dicebant : Numquid hic est filius David ?

24. Pharisæi autem audientes dixerunt : Hic non eiecit dæmones nisi in Beelzebub principe dæmoniorum.

25. Jesus autem sciens cogitationes eorum dixit eis : Omne regnum divisum contra se desolabitur, et omnis civitas vel domus divisa contra se non stabit.

26. Et si Satanus Satanam eiecit, adversus se divisus est, quomodo ergo stabit regnum ejus ?

27. Et si ego in Beelzebub eicio dæmones, filii vestri in quo eiciunt ? Ideo ipsi iudices vestri erunt.

28. Si autem ego in Spiritu Dei eicio dæmones, igitur pervenit in vos regnum Dei.

29. Aut quomodo potest quisquam intrare in domum fortis et vasa ejus diripere, nisi prius alligaverit fortem ? et tunc domum illius diripiet.

30. Qui non est mecum, contra me est, et qui non congregat mecum, spargit.

and said, Is not this the son of David ?

24. But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub the prince of the devils.

25. And Jesus knew their thoughts, and said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation ; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand :

26. And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself ; how shall then his kingdom stand ?

27. And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out ? therefore they shall be your judges.

28. But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you.

29. Or else how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man ? and then he will spoil his house.

30. He that is not with me is against me ; and he that

Healing of the Woman with the issue of blood

tem, quæ exierat de illo, conversus ad

ND a certain woman, which had an issue of blood twelve years,

26. And had suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was nothing bettered,
but rather grew worse,

27. When she had heard of Jesus, came in the press behind, and touched his garment.

28. For she said, If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole.

29. And straightway the fountain of her blood was dried up; and she felt in her body that she was healed of that plague.

30. And Jesus immediately knowing in himself that virtue had gone out of him, turned turbam aiebat : Quis tetigit vestimenta mea ?

31. Et dicebant ei discipuli sui : Vides turbam comprimentem te, et dicis : Quis me tetigit ?

32. Et circumspiciebat videre eam, quæ hoc fecerat.

33. Mulier vero timens et tremens, sciens quod factum esset in se, venit et procidit ante eum, et dixit ei omnem veritatem.

34. Ille autem dixit ei : Filia, fides tua te salvam fecit; vade in pace, et esto sana a plaga tua.

The Jews, particularly those who were dedicated to the special service of God, were in the habit of wearing a quadrangular garment, or piece of cloth, called a talet or tallith. On each corner of this garment was sewn a piece of azure blue silk, intended to remind the owner of the sojourn in Egypt, and from it also hung a fringe, made of threads knotted together, the number of knots representing the four consonants of the name of Jehovah, that is to say, the letters corresponding with the English J. H. V. H. and pronounced « Yahweh ». We are, I think, justified in supposing that Jesus, when the woman with the issue of blood approached Him, was wearing the tallith over His ordinary clothes, and that the hem of the garment touched by her, or, as Saint Luke expresses it, the border, which may have meant the fringe, was the him about in the press, and said, Who touched my clothes ?

31. And his disciples said unto him, Thou seest the multitude thronging thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me ?

32. And he looked round about to see her that had done this thing.

33. But the woman fearing and trembling, knowing what was done in her, came and fell down before him, and told him all the truth.

34. And he said unto her, Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace, and be whole of thy plague.

fringe of the corner, with the symbolic meaning of which she was acquainted. Anxious to win a special favour of Jesus, Whom she doubtless recognised as a representative of Jehovah, it may well have appeared to her a simple and natural thing to testify her respect and to express her request by touching the sacred garment. It was just her way of making an appeal to the power of God. And that power did indeed, as related in the Gospels, manifest itself in a mysterious manner. Jesus felt that a miracle had been unconsciously performed, and that « virtue had gone out of Him » for « He turned Him about » to see who had had recourse to Him. He probably wished, moreover, in calling the attention of the bystanders to this woman, not to allow so touching an example of faith and humility to escape notice.

Lord, I am not worthy

Saint Matthew — Chap. 8

UUM autem introisset Capernaum, accessit ad eum centurio, rogans eum,

6. Et dicens : Domine, puer meus jacet in domo paralyticus, et male torquetur.

7. Et ait illi Jesus : Ego veniam et curabo eum.

8. Et respondens centurio ait : Domine, non sum dignus, ut intres sub tectum meum ; sed tantum dic verbo, et sanabitur puer meus.

9. Nam et ego homo sum sub potestate constitutus, habens sub me milites, et dico huic : Vade, et vadit ; et alii : Veni, et venit ; et servo meo : Fac hoc, et facit.

10. Audiens autem Jesus miratus est, et sequentibus se dixit : Amen dico vobis, non inveni tantam fidem in Israel.

11. Dico autem vobis, quod multi ab oriente et occidente venient, et recumbent cum Abraham et Isaac et Jacob in regno cœlorum ;

6. And saying, Lord, my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented.

7. And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him.

8. The centurion answered and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof : but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed.

9. For I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me : and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth ; and to another, Come, and he cometh ; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it.

10. When Jesus heard it, he marvelled, and said to them that followed, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

11. And I say unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, tenebras exteriores : ibi erit fletus et stridor dentium.

13. Et dixit Jesus centurioni : Vade, et sicut credidisti fiat tibi. Et sanatus est puer in illa hora.

In our engraving, the centurion is represented below the Lord, and at some distance from Him. His humility prevents him from going higher and approaching nearer to Him, Whom he beseeches to heal his servant.

Beneath the arches darkening the narrow street, Christ turns towards him, and graciously grants the favour the soldier asks of Him with so much faith.

The form of Jesus is draped from head to foot, as if to signify that He is not lavish of His gifts, but reserves them for those who merit them. According to one tradition, He was so beautiful, and His whole personality so full of attraction, that, as a general rule, He had to endeavour, as much as possible, to disguise and attenuate a fascination which would otherwise have gained all hearts. It did not suit His purpose to draw the multitude to Him by means of a feeling of that kind ; to do so would have been far beneath the divine mission He held. He wished to influence those about Him by His spiritual power, by His teaching and by His mighty works.

The sacred text tells us that Jesus turned the touching faith of the centurion to account to complain of the scepticism of His own people. This heathen had more confidence in the Messiah than the children of Israel, to whom His coming had long been foretold. Jesus Christ further profited by this incident to prophesy the future extension of His spiritual kingdom upon earth, and the " casting out into outer darkness " of the Jewish nation, as a punishment for their want of faith. Later, in his Epistle to the Hebrews, Saint Paul, the Apostle, works out this thought more fully.

The man possessed of a devil in the Synagogue

Saint Luke — Chap. 4

In synagoga erat homo habens dæmonium im-mundum, et exclamavit voce magna,

AND in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice,

Young man, I say unto thee, Arise

Saint Luke — Chap. 7

LT factum est, deinceps ibat in civitatem, quæ vocatur Naim, et ibant cum eo discipuli ejus, et turba copiosa.

12. Quum autem appropinquaret portæ civitatis, ecce defunctus efferebatur filius unicus matris suæ, et hæc vidua erat; et turba civitatis multa cum illa.

13. Quam quum vidisset Dominus, misericordia motus super eam dixit illi : Noli flere.

14. Et accessit et tetigit loculum. (Hi autem, qui portabant, steterunt.) Et ait : Adolescens, tibi dico, surge.

15. Et resedit qui erat mortuus, et cœpit loqui. Et dedit illum matri suæ.

16. Accepit autem omnes timor, et magnificabant Deum, dicentes : Quia propheta magnus surrexit in nobis, et quia Deus visitavit plebem suam.

17. Et exiit hic sermo in universam Judæam de eo, et in omnem circa regionem.

18. Et nuntiaverunt Joanni discipuli ejus de omnibus his.

AND it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain; and many of his disciples went with him, and much people.

12. Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother, and she was a widow : and much people of the city was with her.

13. And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not.

14. And he came and touched the bier : and they that bare him stood still. And he said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise.

15. And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother.

16. And there came a fear on all : and they glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us; and That God hath visited his people.

17. And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judæa, and throughout all the region round about.

18. And the disciples of John shewed him of all these things.

19. Et convocavit duos de discipulis suis Joannes, et misit ad Jesum, dicens : Tu es qui venturus es, an alium exspectamus?

20. Quum autem venissent ad eum viri, dixerunt : Joannes Baptista misit nos ad te, dicens : Tu es qui venturus es, an alium exspectamus?

21. In ipsa autem hora multos curavit a languoribus et plagis, et spiritibus malis, et cæcis multis donavit visum.

22. Et respondens dixit illis : Euntes renuntiate Joanni quæ audistis et vidistis, quia cæci vident, claudi ambulant, leprosi mundantur, surdi audiunt, mortui resurgunt, pauperes evangelizantur.

23. Et beatus est quicumque non fuerit scandalizatus in me.

19. And John calling unto him two of his disciples sent them to Jesus, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

20. When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?

21. And in that same hour he cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits; and unto many that were blind he gave sight.

22. Then Jesus answering said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, to the poor the gospel is preached.

23. And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.

Saint Mark.

J.-J. T.

A few details about the raising of the widow's son at Nain have been handed down to us by tradition. The name of this son was, we are told, Quadratus, and after his resurrection he at once became a disciple of the Apostles. On this subject Eusebius, that faithful historian of the early days of the Church, quotes : « The actions of Our divine Saviour appealed to the eyes, because they were real; because those whom He healed and raised from the dead were visible, not only at the actual moment of their resurrection or their recovery, but for the whole of the rest of their lives, and not only during the life on earth of Our Saviour, but even after

His Ascension, so that many of them have remained alive until our own day. » (Hist. III, XXXVII, 17.)

Other old traditions relate how the mother of the man restored to life was received by the company of Holy Women who ministered to the necessities of the Apostles and disciples in their journeys to and fro.

Nothing is now left of Nain but a few houses, which have escaped destruction, situated at the base of « Little Hermon » south-west of Mount Tabor. The resurrection of Quadratus was formerly commemorated by a church built on the actual scene of the miracle. The Muslims converted this church into a Mosque, which has long been in ruins. All that can now be seen is a single « mihrab », or niche, in which the lower portion of a white marble column still remains. A few minutes' walk from it flows the Kishon, near to which took place the battle of Deborah, and later that of Alexander, son of Aristobulus, in the time of Pompey.

The Disciples pluck Corn on the Sabbath

Saint Mark — Chap. 2

T factum est iterum, quum Dominus sabbatis ambularet per sata, et discipuli ejus cæperunt progredi et vellere spicas.

24. Pharisæi autem dicebant ei : Ecce, quid faciunt sabbatis quod non licet?

25. Et ait illis : Numquam legis quid fecerit David, quando necessitatem habuit, et esuriit ipse et qui cum eo erant?

AND it came to pass, that he went through the corn fields on the sabbath day; and his disciples began, as they went, to pluck the ears of corn.

24. And the Pharisees said unto him, Behold, why do they on the sabbath day that which is not lawful?

bus, et dedit eis, qui cum eo erant?

27. Et dicebat eis: Sabbatum propter hominem factum est, et non homo propter sabbatum.

and gave also to them which were with him?

27. And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath.

28. Therefore the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

We have here a further example of Jewish sensitiveness, with regard to the rigid observance of the Sabbath. In their eyes, the disciples of Jesus were doubly in fault for acting in the manner related in the sacred text. First of all, because, in thus walking through the corn-fields they went farther than the distance prescribed by law (2,000 cubits), and secondly, because they rubbed the ears of corn between their fingers to extract the grain, which, in the opinion of the Pharisees, was doing work forbidden with equal strictness.

The « ears of corn » here referred to must really have been ears of barley, for it was at the end of April, and wheat does not ripen until a month later.

It is worthy of remark, that Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in His reply to the reproach addressed to Him does not directly attack the minute observances of the Pharisees, but appeals to a higher doctrine, explaining that man was not made for the observance of the Sabbath; on the contrary, the Sabbath was instituted for the benefit of man; the law ordering its observance was, therefore, not one of those which absolute necessity or legitimate authority could not set aside, and, in the case referred to, both these conditions were fulfilled, for the disciples were hungry, and « Jesus was the Master of the law. »

The Canaanites were the descendants of the eleven Sons of Canaan, who were driven out of their country by Joshua, as a punishment, the Bible tells us, for their idolatrous customs and abominations. Defeated and despoiled of their riches, they withdrew to various countries, chiefly to Greece and Africa. Certain writers say that some of them even went as far as Germany and to the districts now occupied by the Slav races, yet others assert that some went to America, but this is not at all probable.

The Canaanites built a great number of cities in Africa, and Procopius relates that in one of them they set up, near a well, two columns of white marble on which were inscribed these words: "We are the people who were saved from the robber Joshua, the Son of Nave (or Nun), who was pursuing us."

Verse 38 of Saint Luke VII indicates with sufficient clearness how the scene referred to took place. It was possible to pass from the court or garden by way of arcades to the room in which the meal was served, without opening any door, and Mary Magdalene could thus, without troubling any of the attendants, make her way in behind Jesus, who was reclining at table with His feet raised above the ground. She had only to bend down slightly to be able to anoint the feet of the Master, after she had poured oil on His head. The table was of the form of a horse-shoe, and the servants waited within the semi-circle formed by it, so that the Magdalene's presence could not possibly have annoyed anyone. Moreover, in the East, access to rooms in which feasts are being held is more or less free to all.

If, on leaving Migdol, the ancient Magdalum, you turn your back on the lake, you will come to a deep gorge or ravine, flanked by the two Horns of Hattin, beyond which you will arrive at the foot of the mountains from which Jesus generally preached, and the scene of His miracle of the multiplication of the loaves. One of these mountains is that of the Beatitudes, which commands a view of the whole district. At your feet is the lake, bathing the last slopes of the Lebanon-range.

Two blind Men healed at Capernaum

Saint Matthew = Chap. 9

Et transeunte inde Jesus, secuti sunt eum duo cæci, clamantes et dicentes: Miserere nostri, fili David.

AND when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, crying, and saying, Thou son of David, have mercy on us.

28. Quum autem venisset domum, accesserunt ad eum cæci. Et dicit eis Jesus: Creditis, quia hoc possum facere vobis? Dicunt ei: Utique, Domine.

29. Tunc tetigit oculos eorum, dicens: Secundum fidem vestram fiat vobis.

30. Et aperti sunt oculi eorum.

Two blind Men healed at Capernaum.

28. And when he was come into the house, the blind men came to him: and Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord.

29. Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you.

30. And their eyes were opened.

It is astonishing how many blind men are met within the East. Blindness is of much more frequent occurrence there than in the West, and this is the result of many different causes. To begin with, the lower orders simply wallow in dirt, and the flies are so numerous and so persistent in their attacks, that mothers and children alike grow weary of driving them away. It is, indeed, no rare thing to see children with their eyes encircled with horrible blue flies.

greedily feeding on them. Besides this, in the spring, the pollen of certain plants, such as the cactus and more especially the fig of Barbary, fills the air, and quantities of microscopic thorns get into the eyes of passers-by, and there remain fixed. Then again, the evenings and nights are very fresh and cool, so that after the oppressive heat of the day many are attracted out of doors, and sometimes they pay dearly for this refreshment, by the loss of their sight. Lastly, I might very well have said first of all, the intense brightness of the sun is a constant cause of ophthalmia, and in some cases of complete blindness. It is customary to keep as much as possible in places where the light is dim or scarcely penetrates at all through the materials hung up to keep out the glare, and the sudden transition from such sheltered spots into the full sunshine outside is fraught with danger. Add to all this the use of water from wells, the purity of which is doubtful, and there are indeed reasons enough for the spread of these painful diseases of the eyes.

Dogs are very numerous in Judæa, Egypt, and other Eastern countries, and Jerusalem alone contains from one thousand to one thousand five hundred. They belong to no one, and live in a half savage state. For all that, however, they have rather a strange code of behaviour amongst themselves, to which they all submit, and which makes them of real service to man, especially in large centres of population. At Cairo, Jerusalem, and other towns of any importance, each group of dogs, consisting of some twenty or thirty members, keeps to one particular quarter, where and on which it lives no strange dog, not belonging to it, being allowed to enter its territory. This accounts for all the barking at night. A squad of dogs attempts, perhaps, to cross the ground of its neighbours, or encroach on property which does not belong to it: a terrible battle ensues, and fierce barking disturbs the sleep of the human inhabitants within hearing. At Cairo, the English residents, weary of the noise made at night, tried to lessen the nuisance by the slaughter of great numbers of the offenders; but, to their surprise, the victims were avenged by the breaking out of epidemics, the streets were no longer cleared of the filth and rubbish encumbering them, and crimes increased, for the robbers were left unmolested now that the dogs, who had acted as police, were gone. The favourite head-quarters of what we may call the dog-clubs, are near the butchers' shops; no member from any other club is tolerated in the neighbourhood; but the traffic is not interfered with in the least, nor is any disturbance ever caused by those who have appropriated the ground.

In every Oriental town there are deserted quarters, where the cactus and other plants grow wild; this is the case, for instance, at Jerusalem, in the southern portion of the Haram area, at the lower end of the shut-in valley, known as the Tyropæon, which is covered with a regular forest of dense vegetation. It is to this part of the city that the bitches retire for the birth of their young, and it is there that they rear their families. Sometimes, when I have been quietly sitting on my camp-stool making a sketch of one or another of the magnificent subjects of this neighbourhood, I have suddenly seen whole packs of little dogs issue from amongst the brushwood, accompanying their mothers in quest of booty.

These animals feed on the rubbish of all kinds, which is flung into the streets, such as the refuse of poultry and meat, dead cats, offal, etc. One day, in the valley of Gihon, on the west of Jerusalem, I noticed the dead body of an ass, which had died during the night and been abandoned in the field where it had fallen. The next day I passed by the same spot; there was nothing left of the ass but the pinkish-coloured skeleton; every scrap of the flesh had been devoured by dogs in the night.

Typical Jews of Jerusalem.

Throughout the whole of Palestine, and more especially in the environs of towns near the main routes of traffic and of travel, there are to be seen resting-places, where several persons can sit down comfortably together, sheltered from the heat of the sun or from the rain. Here and there, for instance, on the mountain slopes rises an isolated group of locust trees, marking some such resting-place, more than one sign indicating how many have availed themselves of it; the ground beneath the trees has become perfectly level, the rock is smooth and slippery, even worn away in parts. Many of these shelters are now the property of Mosques, they probably formerly belonged to churches, and yet earlier, perhaps, to the Jews themselves. Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ appears to have availed Himself often of these spots, as places of meeting; He preached to the people from them; He multiplied the loaves and fishes; He talked with His disciples, or even sometimes retired to them alone for meditation and prayer. These secluded sites are full of attraction, not only on account of the many touching memories connected with them, but for their own natural charm. They are, as a general rule, well chosen, commanding a view of some fine landscape or set in a scene of solemn solitude. Here one can dream and meditate at one's ease, whilst all around the countless fragments of red pottery strewing the ground bear witness to the passing away of many generations.

The Daughter of Herodias dancing

Saint Mark -- Chap. 6

ET audivit rex Herodes (manifestum enim factum est nomen ejus), et dicebat : Quia Joannes Baptista resurrexit a mortuis, et propterea virtutes operantur in illo.

15. Alii autem dicebant : Quia Elias est. Alii vero dicebant : Quia propheta est, quasi unus ex prophetis.

16. Quo audito Herodes ait : Quem ego decollavi Joannem, hic a mortuis resurrexit.

17. Ipse enim Herodes misit ac tenuit Joannem, et vinxit eum in carcere, propter Herodiam uxorem Philippi fratris sui, quia duxerat eam.

18. Dicebat enim Joannes Herodi : Non licet tibi habere uxorem fratris tui.

19. Herodias autem insidiabatur illi et volebat occidere eum, nec poterat.

20. Herodes enim metuebat Joannem, sciens eum virum justum et sanctum, et custodiebat eum, et audito eo multa faciebat, et libenter eum audiebat.

AND king Herod heard of him; (for his name was spread abroad :) and he said, That John the Baptist was risen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him.

15. Others said, That it is Elias. And others said, That it is a prophet, or as one of the prophets.

16. But when Herod heard thereof, he said, It is John, whom I beheaded: he is risen from the dead.

17. For Herod himself had sent forth and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife : for he had married her.

18. For John had said unto Herod, It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife.

19. Therefore Herodias had a quarrel against him, and would have killed him; but she could not :

The Gospels enumerate three ranks of guests invited to Herod's birthday feast: « the lords », that is to say, the court officials; the « high captains », or superior officers of the army; and the « chief estates of Galilee », which gives some idea of the magnificence with which the king intended to keep the anniversary of his birth. The « HERODIAS DIES » was also celebrated throughout Palestine and in Rome: it is referred to in a satire by the Roman poet, Persius Flaccus (V. 169-185). The sacred text tells us the daughter of Herodias (whose name was Salome), « came in and danced », and that « she went forth and said unto her mother: What shall I ask? » which proves that neither of them took part in the actual feast; and, as a matter of fact, that could not have been allowed, as we have explained above.

Dancing in ancient times, especially amongst the people living beyond the Jordan, was very unlike what it is at the present day, and differed greatly also from that in vogue with the Greeks and Romans. The costumes worn were more loaded with ornament, greatly restricting the movements of the dancers, and, moreover, the very spirit of the races was different. The heathen nations, who still worshipped beauty of form, allowed the nude figure to be more or less completely revealed in the dance, as is proved by the various bas-reliefs and statues which have come down to us. In Asia and in Africa, again, the character of the dance is changed; the costumes worn, and the sacred music accompanying the movements, combine to transform it. The feet scarcely move: and in the expressive poses assumed it is the arms which play the principal part. It is but a step from this kind of dancing to acrobatic feats, and, as it was suppleness of the figures of the female dancers which was most appreciated by the spectators, they soon learnt to sling their bodies backwards, so as to touch the ground with their hands, and, raising the feet, to describe arabesques or other figures in the air, the quaintness of which added to the fascination exercised on those looking on. In Greek bas-reliefs representing Median and Persian ceremonies, in the frescoes found in the pyramids at Sakhara in Egypt, and in old Indian and Persian paintings, dancers wearing heavy garments are shewn supporting themselves on their hands, which are loaded with jewels, describing, if I may so express it, the figure of a wheel in a solemn religious manner, adding to the seduction of poses prescribed by hieratic convention, something of the fearful charm of acrobatic feats. The Crusaders brought back with them to Europe representations of this style of dancing, which left their mark on the art of their day; in the Cathedral of Rouen, for instance, there exists a bas-relief representing the daughter of Herodias dancing on her hands.

Saint Jerome relates a tradition that, when Herodias received the head of the Forerunner of Christ, who had so often rebuked her for her disgraceful profligacy, she took a pin from her head-dress and gratified her hatred by piercing the tongue of her dead enemy with it.

The Miracle of the Loaves and Fishes

Saint John — Chap. 6

OST hæc abiit Jesus trans mare Galilææ, quod est Tiberiadis,

2. Et sequabatur eum multitudo magna, quia videbant signa, quæ faciebat super his qui infirmabantur.

3. Subiit ergo in montem Jesus, et ibi sedebat cum discipulis suis.

10. Dixit ergo Jesus : Facite homines discumbere. Erat autem fœnum multum in loco.

Discubuerunt ergo viri, numero quasi quinque millia.

11. Accepit ergo Jesus panes, et quum gratias egisset, distribuit discumbentibus ; similiter et ex piscibus quantum volebant.

6. And this he said to prove him : for he himself knew what he would do.

7. Philip answered him, Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

8. One of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him,

9. There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves, and two small fishes : but what are they among so many ?

10. And Jesus said, Make the men sit down. Now there was much grass in the place. So the men sat down, in number about five thousand.

11. And Jesus took the loaves ; and when he had given thanks, he distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down ; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would.

12. When they were filled, he said unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost.

the fragments of the five barley loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten.

14. Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did, said, This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world.

It is Saint John who, of the four Evangelists, relates this miracle with the greater number of personal details and picturesque touches. We find Saint Philip coming forward on the occasion in a manner specially characteristic of him, partly, probably, because he had charge of the food department amongst the followers of Our Lord, partly because his temperament led him to ask for precise explanations, as is shewn in the account of the last address of Jesus to His disciples. After the consultation with Philip and Andrew, Jesus, Who all the time knew "Himself what He would do", ordered them to make the men sit down. So the men sat down on the grass "of which there was much in the place", in groups of fifty or a hundred, and the miraculous meal was served to them.

The Rich Man in Hell.

J. J. T.

The parable of the wicked rich man is divided into two parts, the first referring to his life on earth, the second to that in the other world. The terrestrial scene is familiar to us; we will try and depict that beyond the grave.

The Hell or « Sheôl » of the Hebrews was divided into two parts: the Garden of Eden, or « Abraham's Bosom » for the righteous, and Gehenna for the wicked. It was naturally to Gehenna that the wicked rich man went. From his place of torment, however, he could see the happiness of Lazarus, for there is said to be a communication between the two worlds. The Rabbis believed Gehenna and Eden to be separated only by the breadth of a hand, or at the most, by the thickness of a wall.

Jesus going up into a Mountain apart to pray

Saint Matthew — Chap. 14

exiit in montem orare, et erat pernoctans in oratione Dei.

SANCT. MARC. — C. 6

46. Et quum dimisisset eos, abiit in montem orare.

The Gospels again and again lay special stress on the fact that Jesus often withdrew from men and went apart to commune alone with His Father.

Before beginning any one of the important acts of His ministry, it was His custom to seek some solitary place, in which to devote Himself for a long time to prayer. This was the case before the choosing of the twelve Apostles, and before His first public manifestation in Galilee. The Sermon on the Mount, which revealed Him as the divine law-giver, was also preceded by such a withdrawal into privacy; the transfiguration, that striking manifestation of the power of the Christ, intended, it would appear, to strengthen the faith of the Apostles, which was to be put to such severe test by the shame of the Passion, was also prepared for by prayer. The Master again acted in a similar way before sending the disciples into the towns and villages to inaugurate their apostolic mission, and again when He performed the miracle of the multiplication of the loaves of bread, which was a symbol of the

that he went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God.

SAINT MARK. — CH. 6

mystery of the Eucharist, which Jesus presents to us as the very centre of His work of sanctification here below. And lastly, on the eve of His Passion, He prayed again and again for a long time on the Mount of Olives, and the Gospel tells us that He « ofttime resorted thither » of an evening.

It was always to lofty spots that Jesus retired for prayer, and on the summits of nearly all the important mountains and hills of Palestine there is to be found the tomb of some prophet or some sanctuary set apart for prayer. These are the high places so often referred to in the Bible, where man, withdrawing from all earthly things, fell himself to be nearer to God, and in a more fitting frame of mind for intercourse with Him. With regard to Our Lord Himself, these prolonged and solitary prayers are to us fraught with a character of mysterious grandeur. Who shall say what ineffable communications took place between the divine Son and His Father, or gauge the magnitude of the interests at stake in the all-powerful supplications of Jesus?

Jesus walking on the Sea

Saint Matthew — Chap. 14

ESPERE autem factus solus erat ibi.

24. Navicula autem in medio mari jactabatur fluctibus; erat enim contrarius ventus.

25. Quarta autem vigilia noctis venit ad eos ambulans super mare.

26. Et videntes eum super mare ambulantem turbati sunt, dicentes, quia phantasma est. Et præ timore clamaverunt.

27. Statimque Jesus locutus est eis, dicens: Habete fiduciam: ego sum, nolite timere.

ND when the evening was come, he was there alone.

24. But the ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves:

for the wind was contrary.

25. And in the fourth watch of the night Jesus went unto them, walking on the sea.

26. And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea, they were troubled, saying, It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear.

27. But straightway Jesus spake unto them, saying, Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid.

Jesus walking on the Sea.

J.-J. T.

The incident of the apparition of Jesus walking on the sea took place, according to the Gospel, in the fourth watch of the night, that is to say, about three o'clock in the morning. There had been a storm, the wind was still high, and the sky was covered with clouds. The darkness must, therefore, have been almost complete, and the disciples could not have seen far from their boat. In spite of this, they perceived the Master from afar, walking upon the waves. It is, therefore, very probable that light emanated from His body, and irradiated all around Him to some extent. Hence the terror of the Apostles, who took Him for a Spirit, and «cried out with fear».

His voice alone, pronouncing His ordinary salutation, could reassure them.

The Son of the Master of the Vineyard

Saint Matthew — Chap. 21

LIAM parabolam audite : Homo erat paterfamilias, qui plantavit vineam, et sepem circumdedit ei, et fodit in ea torcular, et ædificavit turrim, et locavit eam agricolis, et peregre profectus est.

34. Quum autem tempus fructuum appropinquasset, misit servos suos ad agricolas, ut acciperent fructus ejus.

35. Et agricolæ, apprehensis servis ejus, alium ceciderunt, alium occiderunt, alium vero lapidaverunt.

36. Iterum misit alios servos plures prioribus, et fecerunt illis similiter.

37. Novissime autem misit ad eos filium suum, dicens : Verebuntur filium meum.

38. Agricolæ autem videntes filium dixerunt intra se : Hic est heres; venite, occidamus eum, et habebimus hereditatem ejus.

39. Et apprehensum eum eiecerunt extra vineam, et occiderunt.

40. Quum ergo venerit dominus vineæ, quid faciet agricolis illis?

HEAR another parable : There was a certain householder which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a winepress in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country :

34. And when the time of the fruit drew near, he sent his servants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of it.

35. And the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another.

36. Again, he sent other servants more than the first: and they did unto them likewise.

37. But last of all he sent unto them his son, saying, They will reverence my son.

38. But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance.

39. And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him.

40. When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen?

Vineyards with their Watch-towers. J. J. I.

41. Aiunt illi : Malos male perdet, et vineam suam locabit aliis agricolis, qui reddant ei fructum temporibus suis.

Our engraving represents a part of the vine-growing districts in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem.

Each vineyard is enclosed within a wall, and in one corner is a watch-tower, such as that mentioned in the Gospel narrative. The numerous round towers give to the districts in which they occur a forbidding and defiant character all their own. In the environs of Bethlehem, the vines creep along the ground itself, but near Hebron and Aïn-Karim, they are trained to a considerable height, and are supported by poles from four to six feet high. It is in this neighbourhood that bunches of grapes, three feet long, are sometimes seen, with berries wide apart, which have an excellent flavour, not unlike that of the famous Muscatel grapes of Lunel and Frontignan.

Saint Peter walks on the Sea

Saint Matthew — Chap. 14

RESPONDENS autem Petrus dixit : Domine, si tu es, jube me ad te venire super aquas.

29. At ipse ait : Veni.

Et descendens Petrus de navicula ambulabat super aquam, ut veniret ad Jesum.

30. Videns vero ventum validum timuit, et quum cœpisset mergi, clamavit dicens : Domine, salvum me fac.

31. Et continuo Jesus extendens manum apprehendit eum, et ait illi : Modicæ fidei, quare dubitasti?

32. Et quum ascendissent in naviculam, cessavit ventus.

33. Qui autem in navicula erant venerunt, et adoraverunt eum, dicentes : Vere Filius Dei es.

34. Et quum transfretassent, venerunt in terram Genesar.

AND Peter answered him and said, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water.

29. And he said, Come.

And when Peter was come down out of the ship, he walked on the water, to go to Jesus.

30. But when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me.

31. And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?

32. And when they were come into the ship, the wind ceased.

33. Then they that were in the ship came and worshipped him, saying, Of a truth thou art the Son of God.

34. And when they were gone over, they came into the land of Gennesaret.

“Ye seek me because ye did eat of the Loaves”

Saint John — Chap. 6

QUUM ergo vidisset turba, quia Jesus non esset ibi neque discipuli ejus, ascenderunt in naviculas, et venerunt Capharnaum quærentes Jesum.

25. Et quum invenissent eum trans mare, dixerunt ei : Rabbi, quando huc venisti?

26. Respondit eis Jesus et dixit : Amen amen dico vobis, quæritis me,

WHEN the people therefore saw that Jesus was not there, neither his disciples, they also took shipping, and came to Capernaum, seeking for Jesus.

25. And when they had found him on the other side of the sea, they said unto him, Rabbi, when camest thou hither?

26. Jesus answered them and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Ye seek me, non quia vidistis signa, sed quia manducastis ex panibus et saturati estis.

27. Operamini non cibum qui perit, sed qui permanet in vitam æternam, quem Filius hominis dabit vobis. Hunc enim Pater signavit Deus.

28. Dix-erunt ergo ad eum : Quid faciemus, ut operemur opera Dei?

29. Respondit Jesus et dixit eis : Hoc est opus Dei, ut credatis in eum, quem misit ille.

30. Dixerunt ergo ei : Quod ergo tu facis signum, ut videamus et credamus tibi? quid operaris?

31. Patres nostri manducaverunt manna in deserto, sicut scriptum est : Panem de cælo dedit eis manducare.

32. Dixit ergo eis Jesus : Amen amen dico vobis, non Moyses dedit vobis panem de cælo, sed Pater meus dat vobis panem de cælo verum.

not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.

27. Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you : for him hath God the Father sealed[†].

28. Then said they unto him, What shall we do, that we might work the works of God?

29. Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent.

30. They said therefore unto him, What sign shewest thou then, that we may see, and believe thee? what dost thou work?

31. Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat.

32. Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven.

On page 417 of the first volume of his beautiful book on Jesus Christ, Father Didon explains very clearly how matters stood at the moment referred to in the text : « The crowd, who had been dismissed by Him the evening before, had returned in the morning. Having noticed that but one boat remained on the beach, and that Jesus was not there, and that His disciples had gone away without Him, they hoped to find Him again. Moreover, the plot to proclaim Him King had not been given up during the night, and the ringleaders were seeking Jesus, and when they did not find Him, they embarked for Capernaum, in boats which had come from Tiberias, in the hope of thus being able to join the prophet sooner. »

The meeting represented in our picture took place, in fact, on the other side of the lake, just as Jesus was returning from Bethsaida, so that He was compelled to meet the crisis then and there. The way in which the Jews introduced the subject was naïf, and betrayed that they were to a certain extent embarrassed: « Rabbi, they said unto Him, when camest Thou hither? »

Christ reproving the Pharisees

Saint Luke — Chap. 11

Et quum loqueretur, rogavit illum quidam Phariseus, ut pranderet apud se. Et ingressus recubuit.

38. Phariseus autem cepit intra se reputans dicere, quare non baptizatus esset ante prandium.

39. Et ait Dominus ad illum : Nunc vos Pharisei, quod de foris est calicis et catini, mundatis ; quod autem intus est vestrum, plenum est rapina et iniquitate.

40. Stulti, nonne qui fecit quod de foris est, etiam id, quod de intus est, fecit?

41. Verumtamen, quod superest, date eleemosynam, et ecce omnia munda sunt vobis.

And as he spake, a certain Pharisee besought him to dine with him : and he went in, and sat down to meat.

38. And when the Pharisee saw it, he marvelled that he had not first washed before dinner.

39. And the Lord said unto him, Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter ; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness.

40. Ye fools, did not he that made that which is without make that which is within also?

41. But rather give alms of such things as ye have ; and, behold, all things are clean unto you.

The Pharisees and Sadducees come to tempt Jesus

Saint Matthew — Chap. 16

LT accesserunt ad eum Pharisæi et Sadducæi tentantes, et rogaverunt eum, ut signum de cælo ostenderet eis.

2. At ille respondens ait illis : Facto vespere dicitis : Serenum erit, rubicundum est enim cælum ;

3. Et mane : Hodie tempestas, rutilat enim triste cælum.

THE Pharisees also with the Sadducees came, and tempting desired him that he would shew them a sign from heaven.

2. He answered and said unto them, When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather : for the sky is red.

3. And in the morning, It will be foul weather to-day : for the sky is red and lowering.

4. Faciem ergo cœli dijudicare nostis : signa autem temporum non potestis scire? Generatio mala et adultera signum quærit, et signum non dabitur ei, nisi signum Jonæ prophetæ. Et relictis illis abiit.

4. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times? A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas. And he left them, and departed.

AND after six days Jesus taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain apart by themselves : and he was transfigured before them.

2. And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow ; so as no fuller on earth can white them.

3. And there appeared unto them Elias with Moses : and they were talking with Jesus.

AND when he came to his disciples, he saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them.

14. And straightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed, and running to him saluted him.

15. And he asked the scribes, What question ye with them?

16. And one of the multitude answered and said, Master, I have brought unto thee my son, which hath a dumb spirit;

17. And wheresoever he taketh him, he tearth him : and he foameth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away : and I spake to thy disciples that they should cast him out; and they could not.

18. He answereth him, and saith, O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him unto me.

19. Et attulerunt eum. Et quum vidisset eum, statim spiritus conturbavit illum, et elisus in terram volutabatur spumans.

20. Et interrogavit patrem ejus : Quantum temporis est, ex quo ei hoc accidit? At ille ait : Ab infantia.

21. Et frequenter eum in ignem et in aquas misit, ut eum perderet; sed, si quid potes, adjuva nos miseris nostris.

22. Jesus autem ait illi : Si potes credere, omniaabilia sunt credenti.

23. Et continuo exclamans pater pueri cum lacrymis aiebat : Credo, Domine : adjuva incredulitatem meam.

24. Et quum videret Jesus concurrentem turbam, comminatus est spiritum immundo, dicens illi : Surde et mute spiritus, ego præcipio tibi, exi ab eo, et amplius ne introeas in eum.

25. Et exclamans et multum discernens eum exiit ab eo, et factus est sicut mortuus, ita ut multi dicerent : Quia mortuus est.

26. Jesus autem, tenens manum ejus, elevavit eum et surrexit.

19. And they brought him unto him : and when he saw him, straightway the spirit tare him ; and he fell on the ground, and wallowed foaming.

20. And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, Of a child.

21. And oftentimes it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him : but if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us.

22. Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.

23. And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief.

24. When Jesus saw that the people came running together, he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him.

25. And the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and came out of him : and he was as one dead ; insomuch that many said, He is dead.

26. But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up ; and he arose.

Village at the foot of Mount Tabor. J. J. T.

The exclamation recorded in St. Mark, IX, verse 18, shews us how much Jesus suffered from the incredulity of His fellow-countrymen. Faith, which was evidently the very first and most indispensable foundation of His work in every soul, was the virtue to which He frankly attached the greatest importance, and which most touched His own heart; so that it was this faith which won from Him the most signal rewards.

The Charge to Saint Peter

Saint Matthew — Chap. 16

VENIT autem Jesus in partes Cæsareæ Philippi, et interrogabat discipulos suos, dicens : Quem dicunt homines esse Filium hominis?

14. At illi dixerunt : Alii Joannem Baptistam, alii autem Eliam, alii vero Jeremiam, aut unum ex prophetis.

15. Dicit illis Jesus : Vos autem quem me esse dicitis?

16. Respondens Simon Petrus dixit :

WHEN Jesus came into the coasts of Cæsarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?

14. And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist : some, Elias ; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets.

15. He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am?

16. And Simon Peter answered and Tu es Christus, Filius Dei vivi.

17. Respondens autem Jesus dixit ei: Beatus es, Simon Bar Jona, quia caro et sanguis non revelavit tibi, sed Pater meus, qui in cœlis est.

18. Et ego dico tibi, quia tu es Petrus, et super hanc petram ædificabo ecclesiam meam, et portæ inferi non prævalebunt adversus eam.

19. Et tibi dabo claves regni cœlorum, et quodcumque ligaveris super terram, erit ligatum et in cœlis, et quodcumque solveris super terram, erit solutum et in cœlis.

said, Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God.⁵

17. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona : for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

18. And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

19. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven : and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven : and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

20. Then charged he his disciples that they should tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ.⁶

The Pharisees accusing Jesus.

J.-J. T.

Amongst the Jews, when a scribe was raised to the dignity of a Rabbi, a key was given to him as a sign of his office. With this key it was said he had the power to bind and to loose on earth as well as in heaven, and nothing could prevail against him.

The expression "to bind and to loose" was equivalent to the words "to open and shut"; for, amongst the Jews, doors were often only kept closed by means of a mere strap. Locks were, however, also known, and consisted of pieces of wood of the shape of a harrow; fitting into a staple, also of wood, which was unlocked to open the door, with a key of a peculiar kind, made of a piece of wood about a cubit in length, furnished with a number of iron hooks which, when introduced into the lock, raised the harrow-like teeth, and allowed the bolt to be drawn back. In some instances key and strap were used together, just as amongst ourselves, we sometimes use locks and bolts on the same door. This explains the use by Jesus Christ of the words

« the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven », in connection with binding and unloosing, which, strictly speaking, could only refer to straps which were fastened or unfastened, to shut or open doors.

This was not the first occasion on which the word « key » was used in the Bible in a figurative sense. Isaiah had already said, in reference to Eliakim, « The key of the house of David will I lay upon his shoulder; so he shall open and none shall shut; and he shall shut, and none shall open. » The Rabbis taught that God reserved to His own use four keys, which he trusted to no one, not even to the angels; the key of the rain, the key of the tomb, the key of fecundity, and the key of sterility.

Our engraving represents the terrace of a house of Bethsaida in the evening light. Palms were numerous on the shores of the lake in the time of our Saviour; and between them in the distance can be seen the masts of boats, indicating the almost exclusive occupation of the inhabitants, that of fishing.

In this district the houses are not built as they are in Judæa, where every room has its vaulted stone roof. Here buildings consist of arcades made of stone or rubble masonry, each room having three or four such arcades, which support a number of small beams or branches of trees laid lengthwise. These beams or branches form the floor of the second storey, and are overlaid with earth, for which they form a very good foundation. This description of the mode of construction of houses in the districts where Christ taught will help us later to picture for ourselves the scene where the paralyzed man was let down through the roof, to be brought to Jesus.

37. And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us : and we forbad him, because he followeth not us.

38. But Jesus said, Forbid him not :

According to a tradition, resting on no very trustworthy foundation, the child whom Jesus took on His knees, and made the text of His exhortation to His disciples, was none other than Ignatius, the future bishop of Antioch and martyr. The Gospels, however, never mention the name of Ignatius, and there is absolutely nothing to prove that Ignatius of Antioch ever saw the Lord during His lifetime.

With the three women named in the sacred text were also Martha, Salome, the mother of the two Zebedees, Mary Cleophas, Dinah the Samaritan, Mary the Canaanite, the mother of Mark of Jerusalem, the daughter of Jairus, and many others who had been the subjects of miracles, with some of their relations. They formed together a kind of society, which ministered to the needs of Jesus and His followers.

DOST hęc autem ambulabat Jesus in Galilęam; non enim volebat in Judęam ambulare, quia quęrebant eum Judęi interficere.

2. Erat autem in proximo dies festus Judęorum scenopegia.

3. Dixerunt autem ad eum fratres ejus: Transi hinc et vade in Judęam, ut et discipuli tui videant opera tua, quę facis.

4. Nemo quippe in occulto quid facit, et quęrit ipse in palam esse; si hęc facis, manifesta te ipsum mundo.

AFTER these things Jesus walked in Galilee: for he would not walk in Jewry, because the Jews sought to kill him.

2. Now the Jews' feast of tabernacles was at hand.

3. His brethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence, and go into Judęa, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou doest.

Get thee behind me, Satan

Saint Matthew — Chap. 16

LXINDE cœpit Jesus ostendere discipulis suis, quia oporteret eum ire Jerosolymam, et multa pati a senioribus et scribis et principibus sacerdotum, et occidi, et tertia die resurgere.

22. Et assumens eum Petrus cœpit increpare illum dicens : Absit a te, Domine : non erit tibi hoc.

FROM that time forth began Jesus to shew unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day.

22. Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, Be it far from thee, Lord : this shall not be unto thee.

23. Qui conversus dixit Petro : Vade post me, Satana, scandalum es mihi, quia non sapis ea, quæ Dei sunt, sed ea, quæ hominum.

24. Tunc Jesus dixit discipulis suis : Si quis vult post me venire, abneget semetipsum, et tollat crucem suam, et sequatur me.

25. Qui enim voluerit animam suam salvam facere, perdet eam ; qui autem perdiderit animam suam propter me, inveniet eam.

26. Quid enim prodest homini, si mundum universum lucretur, animæ vero suæ detrimentum patiatur ? aut quam dabit homo commutationem pro anima sua ?

27. Filius enim hominis venturus est in gloria Patris sui cum angelis suis, et tunc reddet unicuique secundum opera ejus.

28. Amen dico vobis, sunt quidam de hic stantibus, qui non gustabunt mortem, donec videant Filium hominis venientem in regno suo.

23. But he turned, and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan : thou art an offence unto me : for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

24. Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

25. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it : and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it.

26. For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul ? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul ?

27. For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels ; and then he shall reward every man according to his works.

28. Verily, I say unto you, There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom.

Mary Magdalene before her conversion

MARY, the sister of Lazarus and Martha, of the village of Bethany, near Jerusalem, was named Magdalene, after the place called Magdalum, a village situated on the shores of the Sea of Tiberias, where she was living at the time of her conversion, which took place during the sojourn of Jesus in Galilee. Other origins, notably in the Talmud, are, however, ascribed to the name of Magdalene. Magdala, it is said, signifies « tower », and the sinner got this nickname from the extraordinary height and elaboration of the crown of plait she wore on her head. Juvenal said of a coquette of his day : « Tot adhuc compagibus altum ædificat caput. »

According to the account given by the Talmudists, who allude again and again with considerable detail to the story of Mary Magdalene, she was the wife of a certain Rabbi named Paphus or Pappus, son of Jehudah: but she was unfaithful to him because he treated her so harshly. There was, no doubt, too great a disparity of character between the rigid Pharisee and the young woman, brought up to some extent in the Greek fashion, and of a passionate and independent temper. However that may have been, Mary was certainly not happy with her husband, and yielded to temptation. According to the same writers, the name of her seducer was Pandira: it occurs some dozen times in the Talmud, and the earliest Fathers of the Church mention it also. This Pandira was a soldier, and it is probable that he belonged to the garrison of the citadel of Magdaluim. It is even said that he was the paranymph, or friend of the bridegroom, at Mary's wedding, that is to say, that it was he who went with the bridegroom to fetch home the bride, a fact which would give him ready access to the home of the newly married pair. When he learnt the misconduct of his wife, Paphus, who, it is said, was a doctor of the law, dissolved the marriage, as was permitted by Moses, to escape dishonour. This last-named circumstance will explain the liberty enjoyed by Mary

An Armenian.

J. J. T.

Magdalene when converted, of which she availed herself to become a follower of Jesus.

At the time of her leaving her husband, however, her intentions, as will readily be understood, were very different. She left her home to fling herself heart and soul into the almost heathen life then led by the mixed society of the Roman functionaries, amongst whom, besides true Romans, were Greeks and apostate Jews. In fact, the town of Tiberias was shunned by all true believers, and by Jews attached to their national customs, on account of the heathen spirit which prevailed at, and spread from, the Court of Herod. To frequent that city was, in fact, in their eyes, a sort of apostasy, and the Jews still speak of Mary Magdalene as « Satda » or « the Apostate », and if we add to all these doubtful accusations the fact of her open living in sin with her lover, which made her an object of scorn to her fellow-countrymen and women, and of shame and grief to her relations, she does indeed become such a sinner as the one referred to in the Gospels: « Mulier in civitate peccatrix. »

On the subject of the Magdalene before her conversion, Anne Catherine Emmerich gives some curious details, as can be seen from the following quotations: « Often in an excess of mad fury, when she would look quite superb in her rage, she would strike and abuse every one about her, tormenting her servants especially, and decking herself out with extravagant luxury. I have seen her strike the man who was living in her house as its master, and he,

Woman and Child of Jericho.

in his turn, would maltreat her. She would often fall into a terribly melancholy state, when she would run about in her big house, sobbing and lamenting. She sought Jesus, crying out: « Where is the Master? Where is He? He has abandoned me! » Then a few days afterwards she again relapsed into dissipated and shameless conduct, giving entertainments and falling once more into sin; for curiosity and depravity brought her an ever fresh supply of admirers, and she allowed herself to be completely ruled by the contemptible wretch who lived with her and who received the money paid by her adorers. I believe that, to set some limit to her extravagance, Lazarus allowed her a certain sum of money. She was in a truly deplorable state; pride, vanity, rage, and her evil desires entirely dominated her. In addition to all this, she was subject to convulsions and epileptic fits. The affliction of her saintly relations can be imagined at the degradation of one so admirably gifted. »

In a certain passage of the Talmud a Mary Magdalene is mentioned as the wife of Hamchuna, the father of the Nazarene, that is to say, that, on the strength of a similitude of names, the Rabbis, not content with denying the virginity of the mother of Jesus Christ, tried to throw a doubt on the purity of His origin. This calumnious accusation was sufficiently well known in the early centuries of Christianity, as to compel the Fathers of the Church to refute it categorically. Some of them even felt obliged to admit the name of Pandira amongst those of the ancestors of Jesus Christ. The historian Josephus appears to have been the first to give credit to this blasphemous legend. The Gospel of Nicodemus refers to it; it was reproduced later by Celsus; it was even made the subject of a separate book, called the « Toledoth Iechou », or the book of the generation of Jesus. There is no need to add that all this dust can very easily be dispersed, and that there never was or could be any real confusion between Mary, the mother of Our Lord, and the sinful woman of whom we have been speaking. Dr Seppis, however, at the trouble of making a remark which, taken alone, would be quite enough to render any other proof unnecessary. This remark is to the effect that, according to the requirements of the Jewish law, always so rigorously observed, children who were the issue of an illegitimate union were excluded, even to the tenth generation, from ever entering the priesthood or exercising the functions of a Rabbi. Now, in spite of all the accusations brought against Jesus during His life on earth, He was never reproached with illegitimacy.

Mary Magdalene by Paul Gauguin

The Repentant Magdalene.

J. I.

The Repentant Magdalene

IN the preceding engraving, Mary Magdalene, who was still a sinner, is represented as wearing a red veil. Red was the colour of Typhon, and symbolic of evil. Throughout the whole of Jewish history we find this colour taken to be the emblem of sin. Read, for instance, what is said in Numbers (XIX, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6): « Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring thee a red heifer without spot, wherein is no blemish, and upon which never came yoke: And ye shall give her unto Eleazer the priest, that he may bring her forth without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face. And Eleazer the priest shall take of her blood with his finger, and sprinkle of her blood directly before the tabernacle of the congregation seven times. And one shall burn the heifer in his sight; her skin, and her flesh, and her blood, with her dung, shall he burn. And the priest shall take cedar wood, and hyssop, and scarlet, and cast it into the midst of the burning of the heifer. »

In the ceremony of the scape-goat on the solemn day of atonement for the sins of the people, the High Priest fastened to the head of the goat on which had fallen the lot for Azazel, a long band of scarlet cloth, called the « tongue », from its shape. It is related that during the term of office of Simon the Just, this scarlet band always appeared white, which was explained as being a sign of the special favour of Heaven, for it signified that God granted to His people the remission of their sins; whereas, in the case of the sacrifice offered by other Priests the band sometimes appeared white, and sometimes retained its original colour. This will remind us of the words of the Prophet Isaiah: « Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool »; in which passage the word « scarlet » is evidently also used in a symbolic sense.

In the East, lawyers are the only officials who wear red, and it is, no doubt, from them that the colour of the robes of European legal professors is borrowed.

The repentant Magdalene has thrown aside the red veil of the sinner and has donned the white veil of the penitent. She wears her hair floating behind her: for it was considered a great disgrace amongst Jewish women to appear in public with their hair loose. They were required, even in ordinary everyday life, to hide their hair under veils or by means of bands of material of some kind. If a woman had been surprised in adultery, or was convicted of having allowed her chastity to be violated, the Priest unbound her hair, in token of her shame.

The Magdalene's hair was evidently very long, for she was able to use it to wipe the feet of the Master in the house of the Pharisee. Amongst the ancients, it was the custom for slave women to do the same; they used to wash their master's feet and dry them with their hair. The repentant Magdalene made herself in like manner the slave of Jesus, and was not afraid of letting all the world know the state of her soul. Her dress was that of women of the lowest class: her feet were shod with the sandals of the very poor; and she held herself apart, not daring to come further, thus proving alike her humility and her true penitence.

Must we take literally all that the Gospel says on the subject of Mary Magdalene? for instance, that Jesus had delivered her from seven devils? It is quite possible. This is what P. Ollivier says on the subject in his Friendships of Jesus: «The Magdalene passed through all the phases of moral depravity, and, as the Gospel makes us fully understand, she sank to the lowest depth of depravity, which is also its supreme punishment, the physical and moral slavery of the impure spirit. Whatever the world may say, the devil does play a direct part in certain cases of depravity, and the excesses of frenzy of every kind which occur in the lives of abandoned sinners can be attributed to no influence but his. The Magdalene was possessed in the ordinary sense of the word, and the Gospel does not shrink from describing the depth of her misery by saying that she was in the power of seven devils. It was, indeed, a case of a precious pearl trampled beneath the feet of swine, and we can well understand the ardent supplications of Martha, praying to the Divine Seeker of the lost, Who was to take up that pearl at the price of His blood and to fasten it in His diadem.»

In the «Visions» of Anne Catherine Emmerich there are some very touching, though perhaps not very trustworthy passages, relating to various episodes of the conversion of Mary Magdalene, telling of her feelings when she listened, at different times, to the sermons of Jesus, and of her successive deliverance from the seven devils possessing her. Where the celebrated clairvoyante probably gets wrong and departs from the truth is when she speaks of a pretended relapse of Mary Magdalene after her conversion. Tradition is all but universally against any such hypothesis, and this is why the commentators on the Gospel generally date the repentance and the deliverance of the sinner a few days before the meal in the house of Simon the Pharisee, probably at the time of the healing at Capernaum of the many that were sick or possessed of devils. It is, in fact, only natural to suppose that Mary Magdalene's extraordinary emotion in the presence of Jesus, the abundant tears she shed, and the words of forgiveness spoken by the Master, all point to a quite recent conversion, the first enthusiasm about which led to this burst of gratitude. In spite of her way of looking at things, which is probably misleading, what Catherine Emmerich relates is nevertheless full of charm, and often awakes poignant emotion. Everything about the history of the penitent sinner powerfully appeals to the imagination, and we shall meet her again and again upon our way.

In our engraving Jesus is seen in the Valley of the Kedron on His way from Jericho to Jerusalem, which rises up in the distant background. The spot where the Master is sitting with His disciples is a little hill, marking the last halting-place before reaching the Holy City. The mountain on the right is of chalk, scarcely covered by a scanty growth of brushwood, and on its slopes graze scattered flocks. On the left, broken here and there by grey rocks, stretch fertile districts, with soil of a reddish colour, every undulation of which yields its own crop.

Zacharias killed between the Altar and the Temple

Saint Luke — Chap. 11

PROPTEREA et sapientia Dei dixit : Mittam ad illos prophetas et apostolos, et ex illis occident et persequentur,

50. Ut inquiratur sanguis omnium prophetarum, qui effusus est a constitutione mundi a generatione ista,

51. A sanguine Abel usque ad sanguinem Zachariæ, qui periit inter altare et ædem.

HEREFORE also said the wisdom of God, I will send them prophets and apostles, and some of them they shall slay and persecute :

50. That the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation;

51. From the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple.

In the Middoth treatise of the Talmud, very precise details are given about the place where Zacharias was killed. Between the Altar, where the victims were immolated, and the vestibule of the Temple, called the Olam, there was a space twenty-two cubits in extent. To reach this vestibule twelve steps had to be ascended, divided into sets of four, with a platform between the sets. Two of these platforms were three, and the third was four, cubits wide. The passage between the top of this staircase and the Altar was rather narrow, and paved with many-coloured marbles. The Altar was not situated exactly in the centre of the entrance to the Temple, but slightly to the left, that is to say, towards the southern side. The Altar itself, together with the steps leading up to it, was constructed of stones brought from the Plain of Beth-Cheram, then a virgin district innocent of culture. These stones were unheven, and no iron was allowed « to touch them », for any contact with that metal would have rendered them unfit to form part of the Altar of Burnt Sacrifice. They were, however, as we have already stated, while-washed twice a year, at the Feast of Pentecost, and at the Feast of Tabernacles. They were, however, often cleansed, without being wetted, when the dry blood left by the frequent sprinklings was removed.

In our engraving is shewn the red line referred to above, beyond which the sprinklings of blood were not allowed to extend. Near the flight of steps rises the marble table on which the victims were laid; in the niche above it were placed the birds offered in sacrifice, which were not burnt until they rotted and fell to pieces. At the two corners of the Altar are also to be seen the famous golden horns, so often mentioned in the Bible, whilst, on the right, is the « sea of brass », or great reservoir of water for the use of the Priests in the services of the Temple.

In the Valley of Jehoshaphat, opposite to Jerusalem, there is a monument, which some say is the tomb of Zacharias, killed between the Temple and the Altar. It is hewn in the living rock and forms a kind of pyramid supported on columns. Through a little window a few stones piled upon each other can be seen within this tomb.

The Rich young Man who went away sorrowful

Saint Matthew — Chap. 19

AIT illi Jesus : Si vis perfectus esse, vade, vende quæ habes et da pauperibus, et habebis thesaurum in cælo ; et veni, sequere me.

22. Quum audisset autem adolescens verbum, abiit tristis ; erat enim habens multas possessiones.

LESUS said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven : and come and follow me.

22. But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful : for he had great possessions.

Certain critics are of opinion that it was ambition which led this young man to make advances to the Prophet, but this idea is quite incompatible with what we are told in the sacred text, that " Jesus beholding him, loved him. " It is more likely that he was one of those men who desire to lead a good life, but have not the courage of their convictions.

sign be given it, but the sign of Jonas the prophet.

30. For as Jonas was a sign unto the Ninevites, so shall also the Son of man be to this generation.

31. The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgement with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for she came from the utmost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and behold, a greater than Solomon is here.

32. The men of Nineveh shall rise up in the judgement with this generation, and shall condemn it: for they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

33. No man, when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a secret place, neither under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light.

The streets of the towns of Judæa and Galilee are narrow, tortuous and dark; no carriages are ever seen in them; but, now and then, strings of camels laden with merchandise, or a few horsemen, pass along the wider thoroughfares, on their way through the towns, leaving the narrower ones to foot-passengers. One lane succeeds another, with many cross alleys and many gloomy corners, rendered yet darker by the arches supporting the neighbouring houses. Here and there, patches of brilliant sunshine contrast vividly with the prevailing obscurity. These lanes and alleys wind backwards and forwards, first to the right, then to the left, and rows of houses, such as are so familiar to us in modern towns, are totally unknown. Now and then, perhaps, some tenement fallen into ruin makes the open space a little wider, and reveals a glimpse of the glooming Oriental sky; but this break is succeeded by a yet more gloomy bit of street, a mere dark tunnel, formed of a series of arcades, only lighted here and there, at wide distances, by narrow openings. Our engraving represents some such spot, where a few people have gathered together in the partial shadow, where it is comparatively cool, to indulge in the never-ending gossip they are so fond of. Some sufferers, too, have grouped themselves here, in expectation of the Prophet, who is said to be going to pass soon. The women keep together, apart from the men, with whom they never mix. No doubt the Master will speak; they are all eager to hear Him: their excitement is becoming greater and more intense every moment; the hope of fresh miracles is mingled with gratitude for benefits already received; the enthusiasm, when at last He Who has so long been expected appears, reaches its height, and a woman in the crowd, lifting up her voice, gives utterance to what all the rest have been thinking.

The Healing of the ten Lepers

Saint Luke — Chap. 17

Et factum est, dum iret in Jerusalem, transibat per mediam Samariam et Galilæam.

12. Et quum ingrederetur quoddam castellum, occurrerunt ei decem viri leprosi, qui steterunt a longe,

13. Et levaverunt vocem dicentes : Jesu præceptor, miserere nostri.

14. Quos ut vidit, dixit : Ite, ostendite vos sacerdotibus. Et factum est, dum irent, mundati sunt.

15. Unus autem ex illis, ut vidit quia mundatus est, regressus est cum magna voce magnificans Deum,

16. Et cecidit in faciem ante pedes ejus, gratias agens; et hic erat Samaritanus.

17. Respondens autem Jesus dixit : Nonne decem mundati sunt? et novem ubi sunt?

18. Non est inventus qui rediret et daret gloriam Deo, nisi hic alienigena.

Et cum venisset, factum est, dum iret in Jerusalem, transibat per mediam Samariam et Galilæam.

12. And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off :

13. And they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us.

14. And when he saw them, he said unto them, Go shew yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed.

15. And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God,

16. And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks : and he was a Samaritan.

17. And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?

18. There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger.

The Healing of the Ten Lepers

J.-J. T.

19. Et ait illi : Surge, vade, quia fides tua te salvum fecit.

19. And he said unto him, Arise, go thy way : thy faith hath made thee whole.

It is said to have been in the town of Jenin, or at least in its neighbourhood, that the miracle of the healing of the ten lepers was performed. This town, which is situated on the northern borders of Samaria, where that province is bounded by the vast fertile plain of Esdraclon, is the granary of Syria, which yields such rich crops of every variety. It was on the usual route from the north to the south of Palestine. There were two other routes, that by way of the Jordan and the Mountains of Gilboa on the left, and that by way of Mount Carmel and the sea-coast on the right, but they were far less frequented than the Jenin way, for the numerous robbers rendered them very unsafe. It followed, therefore, that on the Jenin route many beggars and lepers collected to watch the passers-by in the hopes of alms. They were in the habit of grouping themselves about the gates of the town, assailing travellers with their deafening cries, especially if those travellers had many attendants, for they would then conclude that they were important people, likely to be liberal in their gifts. It was on such a group, in this case consisting of ten lepers, that Our Lord exercised His beneficent power. No doubt the presence of His disciples drew the attention of the sufferers upon Him, and He was not one to disappoint the confidence the unfortunate wretches shewed in Him.

Jesus at Bethany.

Jesus at Bethany

Saint Luke — Chap. 10

IACTUM est autem dum iret, et ipse intravit in quoddam castellum, et mulier quædam Martha nomine excepit illum in domum suam.

Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village : and a certain woman named Martha received him into her house.

Jesus found at Bethany a pleasant resting-place after His apostolic journeys. There He need fear no wearisome discussions, no plots to catch Him unawares, no hateful conspiracies against Him. His friends and the holy women would listen to His discourse, and at His feet would sit Mary Magdalene with, perhaps, Johanna Chuza, the woman of Samaria and the Canaanite woman, who were now His followers.

Mary Magdalene at the feet of Jesus

Saint Luke — Chap. 10

MT huic erat soror nomine Maria, quæ etiam sedens secus pedes Domini audiebat verbum illius.

40. Martha autem satagebat circa frequens ministerium, quæ stetit et ait : Domine, non est tibi curæ, quod soror mea reliquit me solam ministrare? dic ergo illi, ut me adjuvet.

41. Et respondens dixit illi Dominus : Martha, Martha, sollicita es et turbaris erga plurima :

42. Porro unum est necessarium. Maria optimam partem elegit, quæ non auferetur ab ea.

In the court of the house of Lazarus, Martha, the sister of him who was raised from the dead, and of Mary Magdalene, is seen returning from an expedition to buy provisions for the Master and His disciples. A little help is needed, or would, at least, be very acceptable in relieving her of her burdens, and she hopes that her sister, who has nothing to do, would come to her aid without hesitation. But Mary Magdalene is listening to Jesus, and is so profoundly absorbed in the words which are falling from the lips of her divine Guest, that nothing would induce her to move, and she is, in

AND she had a sister called Mary, which also sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word.

40. But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him, and said, Lord; dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me.

41. And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things :

42. But one thing is needful : and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

fact, perfectly unconscious of any thing which is going on around her. And was not this hour fraught indeed with infinite charm? Alone at the feet of the well-beloved Master, in the quiet court sheltered from the heat by the stoue walls, and beneath the shady olive tree, which gives forth an undefinable freshness and fragrance, she drinks in eagerly every one of His inspired words. Presently the disciples will arrive, the hour of solemn mysterious communion will be broken in upon by their greetings; farewell now to the peaceful meditation she has been so blissfully enjoying.

Martha.

J. J. I.

The Master is, however, aware of all this, and He will not have her ecstasy broken in upon. She has chosen the good part, and it shall not be taken away from her. He lets His affectionate words penetrate to the very heart of the happy penitent. Martha's anxiety subsides, and again, for some little time, nothing is heard but a low whispering, broken now and then by a louder word, whilst the busy house-keeper silently plies her tasks, and the sweetscent from the burning roots on the hearth floats out into the court.

Aceldama, Valley of Hinnom.

J.-J. T.

Many different interpretations have been given to the mysterious words of Jesus: « But one thing is needful ». Some authors interpret them in far too literal a manner, and, as it appears to me, reduce them to the merest common-place. Instead of rendering Our Lord's expression by « One thing », they translate it merely by the single word « One », so that the sentence runs thus: « One only is necessary », as if Jesus meant to say to Martha: « One of you is enough for the service needed; leave your sister in peace ». Other commentators, including some of the Fathers of the Church, such as Saint Basil, Saint Cyril and Theophylact, give a still more matter-of-fact explanation; they translate the words: « One thing only is needed », but say that they mean: « One dish will be enough; do not be so careful and troubled ». No one can fail to admit that this interpretation is quite out of character with the Master's usual mode of expressing Himself; such language would have seemed very unworthy of Jesus, Who always turned every incident, however trivial, to account, by endeavouring to draw from it some lesson of an elevating kind for His followers. It appears to us, therefore, infinitely preferable to adopt the more dignified rendering, which is always more in harmony with all the traditions of the Catholic Church, and to assume that Our Saviour meant: « But one thing is needful, the welfare of the soul, its education, its moral perfection, its well-being; that is why it is better, like Mary, to seek all that at the feet of the Master, than to occupy herself, as Martha did, with common-place service, which must ever be of secondary importance. Yet another interpretation of a similar kind to this has been given, less generally accepted, but perhaps even more true to the original text, namely, that Jesus praises Mary Magdalene for having hastened at once to Him, thinking of Him only: for the one thing needful to man is, that he should live by Him, and he who gives himself up entirely to that life in Christ has chosen the better part. It is on this last-mentioned interpretation that is founded the traditional and wide-spread use of the names of Mary and Martha as typical, the former of a contemplative, the latter of an active life. Mary is the Carmelite nun, Martha is the Sister of Mercy, and these two characters are often compared with those of Saint John and Saint Peter, the one resting on the bosom of the Lord, the other directing the groups of Apostles. From time immemorial these names have been quoted in this connection in books on the Christian mysteries, and circulated amongst true believers.

12. Aut si petierit ovum, numquid porriget illi scorpionem?

and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

11. If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent?

12. Or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion?

13. If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?

The town of Jerusalem, with the Temple area, is bounded on the east by the Valley of Jehoshaphat. This valley must be crossed in going to Jericho, Bethany, or to the Jordan, so that Jesus must often have passed through it, and it was by way of it that He entered Jerusalem. The Garden of Gethsemane is situated in the north, and its grottoes and groups of olive trees often attracted the Master. Who would frequently retire there for solitary prayer or for conversation with His disciples. He seldom went to the districts on the west or the Holy City, and only to those on the north on His way back from His trips to Galilee.

But no man laid hands upon Him

Saint John — Chap. 7

DISSENSIO itaque facta est in turba propter eum.

44. Quidam autem ex ipsis volebant apprehendere eum; sed nemo misit super eum manus.

45. Venerunt ergo ministri ad pontifices et Phariseos, et dixerunt eis illi: Quare non adduxistis illum?

So there was a division among the people because of him.

44. And some of them would have taken him; but no man laid hands on him.

45. Then came the officers to the chief priests and Pharisees; and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him?

46. Responderunt ministri : Numquam sic locutus est homo, sicut hic homo.

47. Responderunt ergo eis Pharisei : Numquid et vos seducti estis ?

46. The officers answered, Never man spake like this man.

47. Then answered them the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived ?

Jesus writing on the ground

Saint John — Chap. 8

IESUS autem perrexit in montem Oliveti.

2. Et diluculo iterum venit in templum, et omnis populus venit ad eum, et sedens docebat eos.

3. Adducunt autem scribæ et Pharisei mulierem in adulterio deprehensam, et statuerunt eam in medio,

4. Et dixerunt ei : Magister, hæc mulier modo deprehensa est in adulterio.

5. In lege autem Moyses mandavit nobis huiusmodi lapidare. Tu ergo quid dicis ?

6. Hoc autem dicebant tentantes eum, ut possent accusare eum. Iesus autem inclinans se deorsum digito scribebat in terra.

IESUS went unto the mount of Olives.

2. And early in the morning he came again into the temple, and all the people came unto him; and he sat down, and taught them.

3. And the scribes and Pharisees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery; and when they had set her in the midst,

4. They say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act.

5. Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou ?

6. This they said, tempting him, that they might have to accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not.

7. Quum ergo perseverarent interrogantes eum, erexit se et dixit eis : Qui sine peccato est vestrum, primus in illam lapidem mittat.

8. Et iterum se inclinans scribebat in terra.

9. Audientes autem unus post unum excubant, incipientes a senioribus.

7. So when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her.

8. And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9. And they which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest.

Nothing is known for certain of the words written by Jesus on the ground, as He stooped down. According to a tradition explaining how it was that the accusers went out one by one, they were all eager to see what it was that the Prophet was writing, and the eldest of them, by right of the authority his age gave him, was the first to venture to try to satisfy his curiosity by looking down. What he saw was his own name, coupled with that of a woman, with whom he had himself sinned in days gone by. Fearing that, if this shameful fact became known, he would be publicly humiliated, he hurried away, and another of the accusers followed his example, after looking at the writing. Then the next comer in his turn read his own condemnation, and also hastened to flee; so that one by one all had at last retired. Then Jesus, finding Himself alone with the woman, whose self-elected judges had all left her, spoke to her and forgave her.

South-eastern corner of Jerusalem, taken from the road to Bethany. J.-J. 1

The scene is sometimes described in a somewhat different manner. According to this second account, Jesus did not write any actual names on the ground, but merely a list of sins, in which each accuser in turn recognized his own evil-doing, and at once felt himself convicted by the words of the Master : « He that is without sin among you let him first cast a stone at her. » Yet other authors, and perhaps they are in the right, think it is mere waste of time to conjecture what it was that the Lord wrote. The mere fact of His bending down towards the ground, and tracing with His finger certain signs in the dust on the stones, was significant enough of His bitter contempt for the devices resorted to by His adversaries in their eagerness to find something to accuse Him of. This assumed indifference, this silence, broken only by one brief telling sentence, was more eloquent than any discourse could have been, and we can well understand how it affected the men who knew themselves to be guilty. « Conscience », says Shakespeare, « makes cowards of us all ».

The gate near which this scene took place was on the west of the Temple, and in direct communication with the town. On that side there were three gates to which three bridges gave access, these bridges spanning the so-called Tyropæon Valley, the name of which means « the street of the cheese-market ». Of these bridges, two have been discovered in our own day. Of one, the spring of the first arch can be seen at the south-west angle of the wall. This is called the Robinson arch, after its discoverer, whilst another, farther to the north, is known as the Wilson arch, for a similar reason. The southern bridge had three arches, and spanned the space between the portico with five rows of columns, built by Herod the Great, and the so-called Xystus portico, from which Pompey harangued the Jews who had entrenched themselves in the Temple. After the various sieges to which the Holy City was subjected, the Tyropæon Valley gradually became filled in, the bridges were destroyed, and the surroundings of the Temple assumed very much the appearance they have now.

up himself, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?

11. She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee : go, and sin no more.

The Talmud gives us very circumstantial details as to the ceremonies observed in the trial of a woman accused of adultery. If she pleaded « not guilty », and there was strong presumptive evidence against her, her husband was permitted to demand that she should be made to drink the « bitter water » referred to in Numbers V, which was looked upon as a kind of divine test of her purity. The man had to produce his witnesses to the charge made against his wife, and he was afterwards brought, with the accused, before the Sanhedrim, which alone was competent to adjudicate in such cases. The members of the Sanhedrim began the trial by attempting to intimidate the accused, much as the French « juges d'instruction » still do at the present day in difficult cases; threatening the woman with the worst penalties if she did not confess the truth. If these preliminary efforts were without result, the unhappy woman was « set before the Lord », that is to say, she was brought to the Nicanor, or Golden Gate of the Temple, her ordinary garments were taken off, her jewels, such as chains, ear-rings, rings, etc., were removed, and she was clothed in black raiment of mean materials, intended to disfigure her; she was then told that if she were indeed innocent, she had no cause for fear: but if she were guilty, she was already condemned to submit to the penalties commanded by the law. The following curses taken from the book of Numbers were then written by the Priest upon vellum, and the Priest shall charge her by an oath, and say unto the woman, « If no man have lain with thee, and if thou hast not gone aside to uncleanness with another instead of thy husband, be thou free from this bitter water that causeth the curse: but if thou hast gone aside to another instead of thy husband, and if thou be defiled, and some man have lain with thee beside thine husband, then the priest shall charge the woman with an oath of cursing, and the priest shall say unto the woman, The Lord make thee a curse and an oath among thy people, when the Lord doth make thy thigh to rot and thy belly to swell. » Then the Priest filled a new earthen vessel with water taken from the sea of brass, or great reservoir, situated near the Altar of Burnt Offering; thence into this vessel some of the dust of the Temple, mixed with it a noxious drug, read aloud to the accused what he had written on the vellum, to which she had to reply: « Amen, amen, so be it. » Now the words were written with ink of a peculiar non-corrosive kind, so that it could be quite easily erased, and the Priest dropped this vellum with the curses on it into the earthen vessel to « blot them out with the bitter water ». Whilst these preparations were going forward, another Priest seized the woman by the throat, tore open or unfastened her garments to the waist (unless she happened to be very lovely); then he undid and let down her hair (unless again it was of exceptional beauty), and with an Egyptian rope, that is to say, a very coarse rough one, he refastened her garments across her bosom, and delivered her over to the scorn of the by-standers. Other women, with the exception of her own slaves and servants, were allowed to come and gaze upon her in this condition. The Priest who had prepared the bitter water now came and made the accused drink it. If she were innocent, no immediate result would ensue, and she would be allowed to go free and to return to her husband in renewed health, when she would be found to be more prolific than before. If, on the other hand, she were guilty, she would turn pale, her eyes would become suffused with blood, and after she had been driven from the Temple, lest her corpse should defile it, she would die of a disease with all the horrible and disgraceful symptoms described in the curses.

In the engraving on page 232 Jesus is represented in the gazophylacium, or Treasury, which was identical with the space called by the Jews the Court of the Women. It had five entrances, at each of which were placed trumpet-shaped chests for offerings, or treasuries, in which the offerings brought by male and female worshippers were placed, for it was the only part of the sacred building to which women were admitted. In the background can be seen the Steps of the Psalms, known as the Degrees, already more than once referred to. Every morning two Priests, each bearing in his hands a trumpet, appeared in this Court. When the crier posted on the loftiest point of the Temple, whose office it was to announce the rising of the sun, shouted: « There is light on Hebron », these Priests blew first a short, then a longer blast, then three blasts in rapid succession, ascending the steps as they did so. On the tenth step they began a repetition of this series of blasts, repeating it till they came to the Nicanor Gate, or that on the east, an incidental proof that it was, as we have already stated, situated on that side. The Priests then turned towards the west, that is to say, towards the Altar, chanting the words of Ezekiel: « Here must have stood our forefathers before us. » Then they went back again to the east, and prostrating themselves in the direction of the rising sun, they chanted: « Whilst we worship the Lord our eyes are turned towards Him. »

The inscription reproduced below is engraved on a cube of white marble which was found at Jerusalem by M. Clermont-Ganneau, formerly Consul for France in that city. It was one of the stones referred to by the historian Josephus, of which we spoke above, in connection with the Chel, or terrace bounding the inner wall of the sacred enclosure, within which was the Temple itself. The Gentiles were forbidden, on pain of death, to penetrate beyond the Chel, and on the wall were engraved, at equal distances, a series of inscriptions similar to the one here reproduced. They were written in Greek, not in Hebrew, because Greek was the language spoken almost exclusively by the heathen. The stone in question is now in the Museum of Constantinople.

Saint John — Chap. 8

LICERANT ergo ei: Ubi est Pater tuus? Respondit Jesus: Neque me scitis neque Patrem meum; si me sciretis, forsitan et Patrem meum sciretis.

20. Hæc verba locutus est Jesus in gazophylacio, docens in templo, et nemo apprehendit eum, quia necdum venerat hora ejus.

WHEN said they unto him, Where is thy Father? Jesus answered, Ye neither know me, nor my Father: if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also.

20. These words spake Jesus in the Treasury, as he taught in the temple: and no man laid hands on him; for his hour was not yet come.

The blind man washes in the Pool of Siloam

Saint John — Chap. 9

HÆC quum dixisset, exspuit in terram et fecit lutum ex sputo, et linivit lutum super oculos ejus.

7. Et dixit ei : Vade, lava in natatoria Siloe (quod interpretatur Missus). Abiit ergo et lavit, et venit videns.

8. Itaque vicini et qui viderant eum prius quia mendicus erat, dicebant : Nonne hic est, qui sedebat et mendicabat? Alii dicebant : Quia hic est.

9. Alii autem : Nequaquam, sed similis est ei. Ille vero dicebat : Quia ego sum.

10. Dicebant ergo ei : Quomodo aperti sunt tibi oculi?

11. Respondit : Ille homo, qui dicitur Jesus, lutum fecit et unxit oculos meos et dixit mihi : Vade ad natatoria Siloe et lava. Et abii, et lavi, et video.

12. Et dixerunt ei : Ubi est ille? Ait : Nescio.

13. Adducunt eum ad Phariseos, qui cæcus fuerat.

WHEN he had thus spoken, he spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay,

7. And said unto him, Go, wash in the pool of Siloam (which is by interpretation, Sent). He went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing.

8. The neighbours therefore, and they which before had seen him that he was blind, said, Is not this he that sat and begged?

9. Some said, This is he : others said, He is like him : but he said, I am he.

10. Therefore said they unto him, How were thine eyes opened?

11. He answered and said, A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash : and I went and washed, and I received sight.

12. Then said they unto him, Where is he? He said, I know not.

13. They brought to the Pharisees him that aforetime was blind.

14. Erat autem sabbatum, quando lutum fecit Jesus et aperuit oculos ejus.

15. Iterum ergo interrogabant eum Pharisæi, quomodo vidisset. Ille autem dixit eis: Lutum mihi posuit super oculos, et lavi, et video.

16. Dicebant ergo ex Pharisæis quidam: Non est hic homo a Deo, qui sabbatum non custodit. Alii autem dicebant: Quomodo potest homo peccator hæc signa facere? Et schisma erat inter eos.

17. Dicunt ergo cæco iterum: Tu quid dicis de illo, qui aperuit oculos tuos? Ille autem dixit: Quia propheta est.

18. Non crediderunt ergo Judæi de illo, quia cæcus fuisset et vidisset, donec vocaverunt parentes ejus, qui viderat,

19. Et interrogaverunt eos dicentes: Hic est filius vester, quem vos dicitis quia cæcus natus est; Quomodo ergo nunc videt?

20. Responderunt eis parentes ejus et dixerunt: Scimus quia hic est filius noster, et quia cæcus natus est;

21. Quomodo autem nunc videat, nescimus, aut quis ejus aperuit oculos, nos nescimus; ipsum interrogate; ætatem habet, ipse de se loquatur.

14. And it was the sabbath day when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15. Then again the Pharisees also asked him how he had received his sight. He said unto them, He put clay upon mine eyes, and I washed, and do see.

16. Therefore said some of the Pharisees, This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the sabbath day. Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles? And there was a division among them.

17. They say unto the blind man again, What sayest thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He said, He is a prophet.

18. But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight.

19. And they asked them, saying, Is this your son, who ye say was born blind? how then doth he now see?

20. His parents answered them and said, We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind:

21. But by what means he now seeth, we know not; or who hath opened his eyes, we know not: he is of age; ask him: he shall speak for himself.

22. Hæc dixerunt parentes ejus, quoniam timebant Judæos...

23. Propterea parentes ejus dixerunt : Quia ætatem habet, ipsum interrogate.

Amongst the ancients, whether heathen or Jews, saliva and mud were considered good remedies for diseases of the eyes. The aim of Jesus in telling the man born blind to wash in the Pool of Siloam was evidently not to turn the curative properties of that pool to account, but, as was often His habit, to use human means, such as were sanctioned by tradition, whilst, as has been pointed out by commentators, He at the same time brought out the symbolic meaning of the mode of treatment He ordered. In the Talmud, certain medical recipes are given; for instance, we are told : He who suffers from pains in the loins should not rub himself with wine or with vinegar, but with oil; not with the oil of roses, as that was reserved for the sons of princes; apropos of this, however, Rabbi Simon observes that, as all Israelites were sons of princes, they might use it. Further on the Talmud adds that vinegar has a curative effect on bad teeth, but is injurious to good ones.

22. These words spake his parents, because they feared the Jews : for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue.

23. Therefore said his parents, He is of age; ask him.

The blind Man tells his story to the Jews

Saint John — Chap. 9

VOCAVERUNT ergo rursum hominem, qui fuerat cæcus, et dixerunt ei : Da gloriam Deo ; nos scimus quia hic homo peccator est.

25. Dixit ergo eis ille : Si peccator est, nescio ; unum scio, quia cæcus quum essem, modo video.

26. Dixerunt ergo illi : Quid fecit tibi ? quomodo aperuit tibi oculos ?

27. Respondit eis : Dixi vobis jam,

TEN again called they the man that was blind, and said unto him, Give God the praise : we know that this man is a sinner.

25. He answered and said, Whether he be a sinner or no, I know not : one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see.

26. Then said they to him again, What did he to thee ? how opened he thine eyes ?

27. He answered them, I have told et audistis; quid iterum vultis audire? numquid et vos vultis discipuli ejus fieri?

28. Maledixerunt ergo ei et dixerunt: Tu discipulus illius sis; nos autem Moysi discipuli sumus.

29. Nos scimus quia Moysi locutus est Deus; hunc autem nescimus unde sit.

30. Respondit ille homo et dixit eis: In hoc enim mirabile est, quia vos nescitis unde sit, et aperuit meos oculos;

31. Scimus autem, quia peccatores Deus non audit; sed si quis Dei cultor est et voluntatem ejus facit, hunc exaudit.

32. A sæculo non est auditum, quia quis aperuit oculos cæci nati.

33. Nisi esset hic a Deo, non poterat facere quidquam.

34. Responderunt et dixerunt ei: In peccatis natus es totus, et tu doces nos? Et ejecerunt eum foras.

you already, and ye did not hear: wherefore would ye hear it again? will ye also be his disciples?

28. Then they reviled him, and said, Thou art his disciple; but we are Moses' disciples.

29. We know that God spake unto Moses: as for this fellow, we know not from whence he is.

30. The man answered and said unto them, Why herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes.

31. Now we know that God heareth not sinners: but if any man be a worshipper of God, and doeth his will, him he heareth.

32. Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind.

33. If this man were not of God, he could do nothing.

34. They answered and said unto him, Thou wast altogether born in sins, and dost thou teach us? And they cast him out.

The Good Samaritan

Saint Luke — Chap. 10

USCIPENS autem Jesus dixit: Homo quidam descendebat ab Jerusalem in Jericho, et incidit in latrones, qui etiam despoliaverunt eum, et plagis impositis abierunt semivivo relicto.

AND Jesus answering said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead.

31. Accidit autem, ut sacerdos quidam descenderet eadem via, et viso illo præterivit.

32. Similiter et Levita quum esset secus locum et videret eum, pertransiit.

33. Samaritanus autem quidam iter faciens venit secus eum, et videns eum misericordia motus est.

34. Et appropians alligavit vulnera ejus, infundens oleum et vinum, et imponens illum in jumentum suum, duxit in stabulum et curam ejus egit.

35. Et altera die protulit duos denarios et dedit stabulario, et ait: Curam illius habe, et quodcumque supererogaveris ego, quum rediero, reddam tibi.

36. Quis horum trium videtur tibi proximus fuisse illi, qui incidit in latrones?

31. And by chance there came down a certain priest that way : and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side.

32. And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side.

33. But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was : and when he saw him, he had compassion on him,

34. And went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him.

35. And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two pence, and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee.

36. Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?

and ye believed not : the works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me.

26. But ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you.

27. My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me :

28. And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand.

29. My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand.

30. I and my Father are one.⁸

Private Counsels.

J.-J. T.

It was, no doubt, in the morning that the scene in Solomon's Porch took place. This Porch was on the east of the Temple, leading to the Nicanor Gate, and was bounded by the Valley of Jehoshaphat. It would, therefore, be in shadow in the morning, so that Jesus could walk there and teach the people without suffering from the heat of the sun as He would have done in the afternoon. This porch, as we have already stated, had two cloisters formed by two rows of columns; on the side of the Valley of Jehoshaphat it was walled in, and the only openings were small windows at the top of the wall, too high up for anyone to be able to look through them into the Temple. Between this supporting wall, or rampart, and the porch itself, there were shops and stables, in the latter of which were kept the animals destined to be offered in sacrifice. Now, as the space allotted to them was both low and narrow, the merchants who wished to sell their wares encroached on the porch itself, where they could have more room, and it thus became crowded with merchandise, arousing the just indignation of Jesus, to which we shall refer again further on.

THE PHARISEE AND THE PUBLICAN

The Pharisee and the Publican

Saint Luke — Chap. 18

IXIT autem et ad quosdam, qui in se confidebant tamquam justi et aspernabantur cæteros, parabolam istam :

10. Duo homines ascenderunt in templum ut orarent, unus Pharisæus, et alter publicanus.

11. Pharisæus stans hæc apud se orabat : Deus, gratias ago tibi, quia non sum sicut cæteri hominum, raptores, injusti, adulteri, velut etiam hic publicanus.

12. Jejuno bis in sabbato; decimas do omnium, quæ possideo.

13. Et publicanus a longe stans nolebat nec oculos ad cælum levare, sed percutiebat pectus suum dicens : Deus, propitius esto mihi peccatori.

14. Dico vobis, descendit hic justificatus in domum suam ab illo, quia omnis, qui se exaltat, humiliabitur, et qui se humiliat, exaltabitur.

ND he spake this parable unto certain which trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others :

10. Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican.

11. The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican.

12. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess.

13. And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner.

14. I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other : for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased ; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

The Wise and Foolish Virgins

Saint Matthew — Chap. 25

TUNC simile erit regnum cælorum decem virginibus, quæ accipientes lampades suas exierunt obviam sponso et sponsæ.

2. Quinque autem ex eis erant fatuæ, et quinque prudentes;

3. Sed quinque fatuæ acceptis lampadibus non sumpserunt oleum secum,

THEN shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom.

2. And five of them were wise, and five were foolish.

3. They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them :

4. Prudentes vero acceperunt oleum in vasis suis cum lampadibus.

5. Moram autem faciente sponso, dormitaverunt omnes et dormierunt.

6. Media autem nocte clamor factus est : Ecce sponsus venit, exite obviam ei.

7. Tunc surrexerunt omnes virgines illæ, et ornaverunt lampades suas.

8. Fatuæ autem sapientibus dixerunt : Date nobis de oleo vestro, quia lampades nostræ exstinguuntur.

9. Responderunt prudentes, dicentes : Ne forte non sufficiat nobis et vobis, ite potius ad vendentes et emite vobis.

10. Dum autem irent emere, venit sponsus, et quæ paratæ erant intrave-

4. But the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps.

5. While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept.

6. And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh ; go ye out to meet him.

7. Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps.

8. And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil ; for our lamps are gone out.

9. But the wise answered, saying, Not so ; lest there be not enough for us and you : but go ye rather to them that sell : and buy for yourselves.

10. And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came ; and they that were runt cum eo ad nuptias, et clausa est janua.

11. Novissime vero veniunt et reliquæ virgines, dicentes : Domine, Domine, aperi nobis.

13. Vigilate itaque, quia nescitis diem neque horam.

ready went in with him to the marriage : and the door was shut.

11. Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us.

12. But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not.

13. Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

The wise virgins are waiting in the vaulted passage behind the heavy closed door giving access to the court on the ground floor in which are situated the reception rooms, where the wedding banquet is to take place. They have finished singing the nuptial hymns, and, whilst awaiting the coming of the bridegroom, the son of their prince, the gentle yet wise and prudent virgins have fallen asleep. After the excitement of preparing for the bridegroom they are able to give themselves up to repose, for they have placed their lamps, already lit and burning brightly, at their feet. The light from these lamps shines upon the rose leaves with which the floor is strewn and upon the garlands of flowers and fruit with which, according to old-established custom, the sombre walls of the ancestral dwelling are decorated. They can wait without any fear of being taken by surprise, their lamps are full of oil and cannot go out. It is very different with the other virgins, who are returning in the beautiful Eastern night from their fruitless expedition to buy oil. They have lingered by the way to gossip and sing, and to loiter about in the gardens. The shops of those who sold oil were closed; it was late, and they at last realized that they must make all possible haste to return; so we see them, running and laughing, as they come to present themselves at the door of the bridegroom to take their share in the fête.

But the bridal procession has already passed in, the door is shut, they that were ready are gone in to the marriage feast, and the places of the poor foolish virgins are given to other friends.

The bridegroom said unto them « I know you not ».

RESURRECTION OF LAZARUS

The prodigal Son

Saint Luke — Chap. 15

IT autem : Homo quidam habuit duos filios,

12. Et dixit adolescentior ex illis patri : Pater, da mihi portionem substantiæ, quæ me contingit. Et divisit illis substantiam.

13. Et non post multos dies, congregatis omnibus, adolescentior filius peregre profectus est in regionem longinquam, et ibi dissipavit substantiam suam vivendo luxuriose.

15. Et abiit et adhæsit uni civium regionis illius. Et misit illum in villam suam, ut pasceret porcos.

16. Et cupiebat implere ventrem suum de siliquis, quas porci manducabant, et nemo illi dabat.

17. In se autem reversus dixit : Quanti mercenarii in domo patris mei

12. And the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living.

13. And not many days after the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living.

14. And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want.

15. And he went, and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into his fields to feed swine.

16. And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that

29. And he answering said to his father, Lo, these many years do I serve thee, neither transgressed I at any time thy commandment:

and yet thou never gavest me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends:

30. But as soon as this thy son was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou hast killed for him the fatted calf.

31. And he said unto him, Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine.

32. It was meet that we should make merry, and be glad: for this thy brother was dead, and is alive again; and was lost, and is found.

The Tribunal.

We may, perhaps, assume that the parables of Jesus were not all made up entirely on the occasion of their being related, but that He quoted, to enforce the teaching of the moment, some incident of local occurrence, so well known to every one, that it was sure to appeal forcibly to the minds of His hearers. The details given in the parable under notice lead us to suppose that the « certain man who had two sons » lived in the north of Galilee. The districts to the south of the ancient Pannium, which later became Caesarea Philippi, are extremely fertile, and in addition to the goats and sheep, common to all mountainous countries, they support large herds of cattle, which require far better grazing grounds. Hence the mention of the fatted calf in the Gospel narrative. Moreover, the ease with which the prodigal son got away is explained by the near neighbourhood of the maritime cities of Tyre and Sidon, where the sight of ships going and coming in was an ever-present temptation to the taking of distant voyages. No doubt, one of these vessels took the truant to Alexandria or some port of Cyrenaica, or of Tripoli, where it was neither against law nor custom to keep herds of swine, and where he had every facility for debauchery, but, at the same time, was not too far away from his home for him to return to it on foot.

The husks referred to in the sacred text were probably the fruit of the carob-tree, which belongs to the leguminous or food-bearing group, and is met with in considerable numbers throughout Syria and Egypt, occurring also as far west as Italy and Spain. In the last named country this tree is called the Algaroba, a translation of the Chaldean « Kharoub » or carob. It is also sometimes spoken of as the Egyptian fig or Saint John the Baptist's bread-tree, the last name being doubtless given to it because the Forerunner of Our Lord is supposed to have eaten the fruit. The pods of the Oriental variety of the carob-tree are about 6 inches long by from 2 to 2 and a half inches broad: they contain a kind of whitish pulp with a sweet but insipid flavour, and they are still used as food for cattle, as they were in the time of Jesus Christ.

They are, however, also eaten by the very poor, and being obliged to have recourse to them is considered a great hardship, which explains the choice of this detail in the parable of the prodigal son, as an illustration of his extreme destitution.

The Evil Counsel of Caiaphas

Saint John — Chap. 11

COLLEGERUNT ergo pontifices et Pharisei consilium, et dicebant: Quid facimus, quia hic multa signa facit?

THEY gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, What do we? for this man doeth many miracles.

48. Si dimittimus eum sic, omnes credent in eum; venient Romani et tollent nostrum locum et gentem.

49. Unus autem ex ipsis, Caiaphas nomine, quum esset pontifex anni illius, dixit eis: Vos nescitis quidquam,

50. Nec cogitatis, quia expediat vobis, ut unus moriatur homo pro populo, et non tota gens pereat.

Jesus on His way to Ephraim.

48. If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation.

49. And one of them, named Caiaphas, being the high priest that same year, said unto them, Ye know nothing at all,

50. Nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.

51. Hoc autem a semetipso non dixit; sed quum esset pontifex anni illius, prophetavit, quod Jesus moriturus erat pro gente,

52. Et non tantum pro gente, sed ut filios Dei, qui erant dispersi, congregaret in unum.

53. Ab illo ergo die cogitaverunt, ut interficerent eum.

51. And this spake he not of himself; but being high priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation;

52. And not for that nation only, but that also he should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad.

53. Then from that day forth they took counsel together for to put him to death.

Jesus on His way to Ephraim

Saint John — Chap. 11

JESUS ergo jam non in palam ambulabat apud Judæos, sed abiit in regionem juxta desertum, in civitatem, quæ dicitur Ephrem, et ibi morabatur cum discipulis suis.

JESUS therefore walked no more openly among the Jews; but went thence unto a country near to the wilderness, into a city called Ephraim, and there continued with his disciples.

The district near the wilderness called Ephraim, to which Our Lord retired, is said to be situated near Djisuch, in the wild, shut-in mountain group bordering the Valley of Ainel-Aramiyeh, beyond which are the curious and interesting ruins of Shiloh. True harbours of refuge, the gorges and ravines, dominated by all but inaccessible mountains, clad with luxuriant verdure, can only be reached by paths suitable to goats. At day-break the smoke from secluded mountain homes can be seen, crowning the summits of the hills, whilst, deep down in the valleys, where the vegetation is denser, the morning mist still hovers. There, amongst the countless clumps, I had almost said the thickets, of pink cyclamen, Jesus could easily have found the refuge He sought. It is easy to understand the reasons for His retirement; the exasperation of the Jews against Him was such that His life was in danger, and He had not yet finished His work, or, to quote His own words, "His hour had not yet come", and it did not suit Him to expose Himself needlessly to a violence to which it was not His intention to submit.

Suffer the little children to come unto me

Saint Mark — Chap. 10

Lr offerebant illi parvulos, ut tangeret illos. Discipuli autem comminabantur offerentibus.

14. Quos quum videret Jesus, indigne tulit et ait illis: Sinite parvulos venire ad me, et ne prohibueritis eos: talium enim est regnum Dei.

15. Amen dico vobis: Quisquis non receperit regnum Dei velut parvulus, non intrabit in illud.

16. Et complexans eos et imponens manus super illos, benedicebat eos.

SANCT. LUC.—C. 18.

15. Afferebant autem ad illum et infantes, ut eos tangeret. Quod quum viderent discipuli, increpabant illos.

16. Jesus autem convocans illos dixit: Sinite pueros venire ad me, et nolite vetare eos; talium est enim regnum Dei.

17. Amen dico vobis: Quicumque non acceperit regnum Dei sicut puer, non intrabit in illud.

AND they brought young children to him, that he should touch them: and his disciples rebuked those that brought them.

14. But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

15. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein.

16. And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.

SAINT LUKE—CH. 18.

15. And they brought unto him also infants, that he would touch them: but when his disciples saw it, they rebuked them.

16. But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

17. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein.

Suffer the little children to come unto me.

Jesus is about to pass by: the fame of His benevolent works has gone before Him: everybody knows how kindly He receives all who come to Him. Sick children are brought to Him to be healed of their sufferings, those who are well, that He may touch them and thus preserve them from all future ill. In Palestine, the women take their children to market and everywhere else with them, and, on hearing that the Master was to pass by, they hastened to Him in great numbers, carrying their little ones. Crowds drew other crowds, and very soon the road would doubtless have been blocked up, making circulation impossible, so the disciples interfered, rebuking and driving back the mothers whose cries and supplications gave a certain appearance of disorder to the scene. But Jesus shewed Himself indulgent to the popular enthusiasm: He was always good to everybody, and all who had come to Him went away healed, or rejoicing in the blessings they knew would for long afterwards accrue to them through the touch of the Prophet. The words of the text: « indigne tulit », or much displeased, shew that the roughness of the disciples greatly vexed Our Lord and made Him very angry with His followers. It always grieved Him to find Himself so little understood even by His disciples, and He sometimes said to them: « Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. »

5. Et quum venisset ad locum, suscipiens Jesus vidit illum, et dixit ad eum: Zachæe, festinans descende, quia hodie in domo tua oportet me manere.

6. Et festinans descendit, et excepit illum gaudens.

7. Et quum viderent omnes, murmurabant dicentes, quod ad hominem peccatorem divertisset.

8. Stans autem Zachæus dixit ad Dominum: Ecce dimidium bonorum meorum, Domine, do pauperibus, et si quid aliquem defraudavi, reddo quadruplum.

5. And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and saw him, and said unto him, Zacchæus, make haste, and come down, for to-day I must abide at thy house.

6. And he made haste, and came down, and received him joyfully.

7. And when they saw it, they all murmured, saying, That he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner.

8. And Zacchæus stood, and said unto the Lord; Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold.

9. And Jesus said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house, forso-much as he also is a son of Abraham.

10. For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

The Valley of the Kedron near Mar-Saba.

J.-J. I.

The sycamore tree is held in high esteem in Palestine, where it may, so to speak, be called a privileged tree. Near villages, taverns and wayside resting-places, specimens may be seen which have grown in the course of years to colossal proportions. They keep their foliage till the winter is far advanced, and travellers rest beneath their shade or friends meet together under them for the interminable discussions. Orientals are so fond of. The branches begin low down, almost close to the ground, so that it is easy to climb up and sit amongst them. This rendered it a very simple matter for Zacchæus to overlook the crowd and watch the passing by of Him Who had drawn it together.

The Healing of the two blind Men at Jericho

egredientibus illis ab Jericho, secuta est cum turba multa,

30. Et ecce duo cæci sedentes secus viam audierunt, quia Jesus transiret, et clamaverunt dicentes : Domine, miserere nostri, fili David.

31. Turba autem increpabat eos, ut tacerent. At illi magis clamabant dicentes : Domine, miserere nostri, fili David.

32. Et stetit Jesus et vocavit eos, et ait : Quid vultis ut faciam vobis ?

33. Dicunt illi : Domine, ut aperiantur oculi nostri.

34. Misertus autem eorum Jesus tetigit oculos eorum, et confestim viderunt, et secuti sunt eum.

As they departed from Jericho, a great multitude followed him.

30. And behold, two blind men sitting by the way side, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David.

31. And the multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace : but they cried the more, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David.

32. And Jesus stood still, and called them, and said, What will ye that I shall do unto you ?

33. They say unto him, Lord, that our eyes may be opened.

34. So Jesus had compassion on them, and touched their eyes : and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him.

There is nothing now left of Jericho but its site and a few ruins. The houses having been built of stones and mud, the rain has washed away the latter, leaving the former only, which gradually became scattered round about. The foundations have, however, in many cases remained, and, with patience and care, a considerable portion of the town can be made out, with the remains of aqueducts, the beginnings of bridges, etc. The spring which Elisha « healed » too, with the streams which flow from the mountain, still yield a plentiful supply of water for the needs of a large and important town. The soil is very fertile, and we can well understand the ancient renown of the city of Jericho, the name of which signifies « the place of fragrance ».

The scene described in the Gospel as taking place at Jericho resembled greatly many another related in the sacred text. As we have already stated, beggars collected in preference beside the main roads of traffic as they were more likely to receive liberal alms there than elsewhere. These two blind men, guessing from the crowds attending Him, that the Prophet was about to pass by, cried out to attract His attention and get Him to heal them. Jesus, as was His wont, was occupied in teaching the people, and did not at first appear to perceive what was required of Him: the bystanders, therefore, annoyed by the noise the men were making, which prevented them from hearing the words of the Teacher, rebuked them, telling them to hold their peace. But they only cried out the more, and in the end their prayer was granted.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

(3) Page 160: "He could there do no mighty work."

"He could do no miracles" means here as elsewhere in the Bible that He had His reasons for not choosing to do them; such as the unbelief of the people of the country. (Menochius, etc.)

(4) Page 182: "Him hath God the Father sealed."

He marked Him with His seal in proclaiming Him to the world as His Son, and as the Messiah foretold by the Prophets, by the testimony of the voice coming down from Heaven, and by numerous and striking miracles. (Menochius.)

(5) Page 194: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

By these words Saint Peter means to say that Jesus is the Son of God by birth and not by adoption, and he thus confesses the divinity of His Master. (Menochius, etc.)

(6) Page 194: "He commanded them to tell no man that He was Jesus the Christ."

Our Saviour forbade His disciples to publish His miracles and publicly to proclaim His divinity, either with a view to not giving occasion for the blasphemy and violence of His enemies, or with a view to awaiting the time when the minds of men, being better prepared, should be more capable of receiving that sublime truth, His resurrection notably. (Menochius, Fillion.)

(7) Page 240: "Before Abraham was, I am."

Jesus meant to say that He is God, and as such had existed before all time. (Menochius, etc.)

(8) Page 242: "I and my Father are one."

Christ here asserts that He possesses the same divine nature as His Father, that He is God even as He is one and the same God with Him. (Cornel. a Lap., Menochius, and all other Catholic commentators.)
